FRED CLARKE'S LAST SEASON

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.-When the National league pennant race of 1915 gets under way a field leader who has seen more game will be among the missing. Clarke went to Pittsburgh at the beginning of the season of 1900, so he has been in active charge of the Pirates for fifteen successive seasons. He was included in the fourteen players who were transferred to the Smoky City from Louisville when Barney Dreyfus, who had been at the head of the Louisville base ball club, purchased an interest in the Pittsburgh club. Fourteen Colonels, as the Louisville players were known when that city was represented in the twelve-club National league circuit, were transferred to Pittsburgh for five Pirates and the sum of $25,000. Other notables besides Clarke in this transfer were Hans Wagner, Claude Richie, Tommy Leach, Charles Philippi and Rube Waddell. Waddell remained there only two seasons, Richie until 1908, Philippi until 1911, Leach until 1912, and Wagner is still there with Clarke.

Clarke's managerial career has been a noteworthy one. For fourteen successive years his team was a pennant contender, never finishing outside the first division. same position last season. In twelve campaigns he finished third or better. In the campaigns of 1901, 1902 and 1963 Clarke led Otopolik and Cook starred brightly. his team to the National league championnot up to expectations, fumbling being a defeating Boston and Detroit, respecthe championship, tleing the Giants for second place after the Cubs had won the memorable play-off game which put the Giants one game out of first place. Always Great Player.

As a player Clarke's name will go down in history as one of the greatest in the game In his prime he was a remarkable bateman and he closed his active career or the diamond with a mark of .834 for 101 games in 1911, his eighteenth consecutive season in the major league. Getting away with a mark of .75 in 1894, when he joined the Louisville team in midseason, he followed with marks of .300 or better in ten of the twelve succeeding seasons, missing the select circle by a point in 1906 and getting .281 in 1900, his first season at Pittsburgh. Clarke is one of the players who can claim distinction as a .400 bats man, having reached the high mark of 406 in 1897. In two other campaigns he batted above 350. In his eighteen years of active service he finished in the charmed circle eleven times and never batted as low as .200.

Great as Clarke was with the willow his batting never outshone his ability in field. Up to the time of his retirement he was among the best outfielders in the game, rated solely from the standpoint of fielding. In the All-Star National league teams named in "Spalding's Guide" for the five-year periods between 1913. 900-1905 and 1905-1910, Clarke got the call each time for left field. He was rated for his ability to "play the batsman," and he could cover ground and throw with the best of them.

Record Hard to Understand.

His fielding records while with the Louisville club are difficult to understand in view of the great difference between these marks and his Pittsburgh figures. D'fferent scoring methods may have caused the difference. In four of the continuous service as a manager in its five campaigns at Louisville for which ranks than any other leader now in the figures are available Clarke made great

Since that time he has pennants and two world's championships gone in a few times to "pinch hit," but included in the playing records.

Career Started in 1802.

The base ball career of the Pirate chieftain dates back to 1892, when he joined the Hastings, Neb., team at the age of 19. He finished that season with the St. Joseph (Mo.) Independents and the following spring he joined the St. Joseph team of the Kansas State league. In midseason of 1893 he went to the Montgomery. Ala., team of the Southern league. For the first two months of the season of 1894 he was with the Savannah, Ga., team and then he was purchased by Louisville, at that time in the National league. Since June, 1894, Clarke has been a prominent figure in the National league. Fred Clarke's record in the National
