THE OMAHA DAILY BEE

FOUNDED BY EDWARD ROSEWATER. VICTOR ROSEWATER, EDITOR.

The Bee Publishing Company, Proprietor. BEE BUILDING, FARNAM AND SEVENTEENTH. Entered at Omaha postoffice as second-class matter.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION. per year. per month per year.

A pally and Sunday 65c 86.00

Daily without Sunday 65c 6.00

Evening and Sunday 90c 6.00

Evening without Sunday 90c 6.00

Sunday Bee only 90c 2.00

Send notice of change of address or complaints of irregularity in delivery to Omaha Bee, Circulation Department.

Remit by draft, express or postal order. Only two-cent stamps received in payment of small ac-counts Personal checks, except on Omaha and eastern exchange, not accepted.

Omaha—The Bee Sulfding.
South Omaha—2018 N street.
Council Bluffs—14 North Main street.
Lincoln—26 Little Building.
Chicago—261 Hearst Building.
New York—Room 1106, 286 Fifth avenue.
St Louis—262 New Bank of Commerce.
Washington—125 Fourteenth St., N. W.

CORRESPONDENCE. Address communications relating to news and editorial matter to Omaha Bee, Editorial Department.

SEPTEMBER CIRCULATION.

56,519

State of Nebraska, County of Douglas, ss.

Dwight Williams, circulation manager of The Bee Publishing company, being duly sworn, says that the average daily circulation for the month of September, 1914, was 56.13. ber, 1914, was 56,519.
DWIGHT WILLIAMS, Circulation Manager. Subscribed in my presence and sworn to before me, this id day of October, 1914. ROBERT HUNTER, Notary Public.

Subscribers leaving the city temporarily should have The Bee mailed to them. Address will be changed as often as requested,

Now, for the big week at Ak-Sar-Ben.

If prayers will end the war, it must soon be

Is congress going to adjourn and let merchant marine revival sink?

The expression, "civilized warfare," enough to make a heathen cry.

Peace may have her victories, but not at present on the continent of Europe.

Armageddon for the time being seems to be located in Illinois and Pennsylvania.

When it comes to the publicity end of the war game, the British have the Germans beat to a frazzle.

The real election returns will not be in until we know the exact monetary effect on Sulzer as a chautaulker.

The Atlanta Constitution is correct—the guntoter is nine-tenths on the way to the use of the murderous weapon.

If a discarded cocked hat could be of help, either of the belligerents might be accommodated by applying at our White House.

Whether our Ak-Sar-Ben street lighting is an emergency or merely an incident, is yet to be determined by our municipal financiers.

Senator Burton's magnificent achievement in puncturing that inflated rivers and harbors appropriation bill should not be so soon for-

Missouri is also voting on a suffrage amendment this fall. But for some reason or other, Missouri is not considered as fallow ground for reform as Nebraska.

By actual count 225 paragraphers up to date have observed that the prohibitionists have taken the gin out of Virginia,-New Orleans State.

Now, for the big week of Ak-Sar-Ben. lowest form of humor is a pun on a name.

The information bureau looks out for garages for visiting autos as well as rooms for the owners. Another sign of the times which indicates the progress made during these twenty years of Ak-Sar-Ben.

Colonel Roosevelt ventures to predict that the progressives will carry Louisiana at the impending election, and thus make the first real break in the solid south. We fear the colonel is altogether too optimistic.

"One hour in the sun will produce freckles enough to keep one busy with lotions for an hour," warns a beauty doctor. Whereat one can almost hear the "bare-foot bay with cheek of tan" observe, "I should worry."

William Allen White says Arthur Capper, republican nominee for governor of Kansas, "is not a man of bluster. And the Kansas City Journal concludes that, therefore, "the buil moose party was no place for him," though he strayed into it once.

New York has subscribed nearly half of the gold fund, while Chicago, which comes next highest pro rata, puts in a little less than onesixth. Despite all protests about the money power being no longer entrenched in Wall street, that is where the coin must still be gotten when it is needed.

Rev. John B. Newman, pastor of the Madison Avenue Congregational church of New York City, was greeted by a large audience in Rev. Mr. Sherrill's church for his discourse on character. The Harvest Home concert of the Saratoga Union Sunday school presented an interesting program of music and recitations. Those participating were: Miss Rustin, Mise Hannah Gruenig, Miss Maggie McKay, Miss Liusie Mackennie, Miss Nettie McKay, Miss Callie Hair, Miss Gertle Luce, Miss Anna Creig, Miss Ellen Gruenig, Master Wilton Crowell, Rev. Mr. Pelton and Measra. Christic, Rustin and Smith.

The piece put on at the German theater was "The Earl of Essex," with Mr. Mulchain and Miss Spahn in the leading roles.

Mrs. W. J. Martin has gone cast to visit relatives. F. D. Carman of New York has opened a law office in connection with W. J. Connell's office

W. Elliott of Henry county, lows, father of Nathan Elliott of this city, is visiting his son for a few days. Piper of the Union Pacific headquarters has returned from an extensive trip through the west.

Social Welfare and the War.

As a result of the war, Jane Addams sees an eclipse falling over the great social welfare propaganda in this and other countries. This remarkable movement which has made such headway in the last few years is, in her view, about to enter a twilight zone from which it will not wholly emerge for years to come. "All organized social welfare activities are put back for years," says Miss Addams. "We have to work up public opinion anew."

The apprehended mischief is to be played by the psychological reaction of wholesale slaughter upon humanity. Human sensibilities had been whittled down to their finest point, the social consciousness was never more alert. We vaunted the tendency toward universal peace as the climax of our altruistic dreams. "One has a vested right," says Miss Addams, "in the finer sensibilities of the human race, which are to be called upon for aid in the betterment of the conditions under which we live. Then comes along a thing like this war and makes its appeal to brutish instincts and we are thrown back."

Some may think Miss Addams too pessimistic. Others may knowingly say we had idly reckoned too far on the influence of our ideals if we forgot the existence of "brutish instincts" or that we were warned not to deceive ourselves, while yet carrying on our splendid social welfare work, as to the dawn of that blissful day when nations shall war no more. But, however much we may wish that the very horrors of this war shall accelerate the work of war prevention, let us get the force of this observation by Miss Addams:

When a million men are suffering in trenches wet. and cold and wounded, what are a few children suffering under hard conditions in the factories? Take old age pensions, upon which England, France and Germany have been working. With widows and fatherless children numbered by the thousands in those countries, what are a few old people, more or less? It will be years before these things are taken up again. The whole social fabric is tortured and Though new zeal and determination may be born out of this awful war, new obstacles to social service are sure to come also. But., of course, Miss Addams is not thinking that, because the task will be larger, it must be abandoned, but rather that it must enlist our more energetic and unceasing efforts.

The Political Party Deadline.

No person shall be entitled to or allowed to file a nomination certificate unless the political party which he affiliates with polled at the last election, before the primary election to be held, at least one per cent of the entire vote in the state, county or sub-division in which he seeks the nomination for office.-Nebraska Election Law.

One per cent of the total vote is a mighty small fraction, but it offers opportunity this year for Nebraska to slough off a few party circles like those credited to the populists, the progressives or the prohibitionists, if not throughout the state, at least in most of the various senatorial and representative districts, counties and other minor sub-divisions. In New Jersey where the deadline is fixed in the primary vote, the progressives have just forfeited their place on the regular bailot by failing to poll the required percentage of the total. In this county the populists have been out of commission for some time, and if the vote in the last primary were the test, the progressives would be self-eliminated too.

The aggregate vote in the entire state in the coming Nebraska election will probably be in the neighborhood of 250,000, of which one per cent will be 2,500. It will be interesting to see whether some of our so-called political parties do not find themselves put hors du combat by Japan's Idea of Us.

A professor in the University of Tokio has recently been quoted by newspapers in New York, where he visited, as saying that certain interests have persistently and systematically tried to create the impression in Japan that the people of the United States hold the Japanese in contempt and that they are in no sense friends. We have had evidences in this country that, if such perfidious influences were at work. they have not been entirely unsuccessful, for frequent reports of anti-American demonstrations in Japan have come to us. It must be admitted, however, that the enlightened view of Americans in Japan is not this.

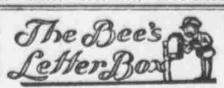

So far as the United States is concerned, it has been as a rule generous in its treatment of the Japanese and is now, as a result of the European war, about to enter upon more intimate relations through the open door of commerce. With the great trading nations of Europe engaged in war, we shall be called on for a large measure of the commerce which they have heretofore supplied. Our merchants and manufacturers will, undoubtedly, make the most of their special opportunity of impressing Japan with both the friendship of the United States as well as the mutual advantage of their trade. In the end, we may feel sure, closer and more cordial relations will ensue. This is not the time for putting the opportunities which come to us through the crucible of war to mean advantage, but rather for cultivating the intimacies of confidence and the square deal in business. If we do what is right we may expect large things in Japan.

Short Ballot in Kansas.

Just by way of illustration and stimulation, let us call the attention of Nebraska to the plight of neighboring Kansas, where the demand for a short ballot is even stronger than it is with us. While one or two elective offices familiar here are missing there, the Kansas ballot includes as novelties to us the offices of state superintendent of insurance, state printer and three places on the State Board of Irrigation. County tickets in Kansas are likewise so long-drawn-out as to call for radical revision, one of the boasts of Henry J. Allen, in his campaign as the progressive candidate for governor. being, if elected, he is "going to take a club to the archaic system of county government that has persisted since 1740 under the English conception and knock it out." He further declares that the short ballot program can save the counties of Kansas $1,000,000 a year and the state $500,000. If cutting out the surplus offices can do this in Kansas, it can do something like it also in Nebraska.

Wilson Agrees to Let Congress Adjourn.-Chicago

Tribune Headline Come, come, the president is against bossism!

Brief contributions on timely topics invited. The Bee assume no responsibility for opinions of correspondents. All letters enhject to condensation by editor.

Then Someone Must Be Prejudiced. SOUTH OMAHA, Oct. 3.-To the Editor of The Bee: I note the letter from my friend, F. A. Agnew, calling ex-President Roosevelt an "American humbugger." onsider this a personal insult, when know, and the judge knows, that this is not true. Just because T. R. would not be humbugged at Chicago in 1912, and the judge now calls him a "humbug." I claim the right to honesty, and believe r. R. is as honest and sincere as A. Lincoin was. I happen to have lived during Lincon's administration, and I know, and the judge knows, that Lincoln was more abused than T. R. I admire the judge for his "frankness," and he is not ashamed to sign his name, but the judge has one bad trait-he is prejudiced-but this I will not admit of myself. The judge seems to think that if Taft had been president this European war would not have been. This is my view-not of Taft, but of T. R .- for T. R. is like Emperor William: To have peace you must be prepared for war. T. R. is like myself. no standpat republican. We believe the United States is progressive and all parties, the democratic party not excepted, should be progressive in character.

J. G. BLESSING.

Enters a Protest OMAHA, Oct. 2 .- To the Editor of The Bee: Mr. Olthoff in today's Bee tells us that Germany in this war is after money, and he has fixed the amount at $5,000,000. 600. Moreover, he says the Germans will see to it that the kaiser lays France and England a waste with fire and sword. just as he did to Belgium.

I see no use of arguing with such a man, but I do protest against printing such monstrous letter, calculated to fan hatred in this country among people who came from different parts of Europe

CAESAR REGAZZI. 1939 Dodge Street.

Tribute to an Omaha Girl. OMAHA, Oct. 3.-To the Editor of The Bee: Omaha church folk who read the Christian Endeavor World have been reminded in the last issue of the loss to them and their city of one whose name and influence reached far and wide and will live long after her, Miss Mabel Earle, who died on August 30. Miss Earle was a writer, both of prose and poetry, of rare quality, and of her the World says: Miss Earle made thousands of friends by her writings in this paper. She never wrote merely for the sake of writing, or for the mere money returns, but always had a deep purpose in her stories, a purpose revealed very earnestly in her letters concerning them. * * But Miss Earle was, above all, a poet. No better religious poetry has been written in recent years

The Christian Endeavor World says that Miss Earle's last serial for that paper embodied her experiences in the Omaha tornado and "conveyed the lesson of a calm trust in God in the midst of trial, which she would wish to be her final message to her friends." The tribute to this excellent young woman concludes with two stanzas of her recent poem, "The Gates of Evening," which was used as the cover poem for a late issue of the Borne on a sea of deepening rest Our spirits drift across the bar To that far portal in the west— The sunset cloud, the sunset star.

Thy mercy, Lord, on toil and pain! Thy pardon, Lord, for fault and sin't Fling wide the gates of rest again, And let Thy weary children in AMICUS.

Questions from a Questioner. BROKEN BOW, Neb., Oct. 3 .- To the Editor of The Bee: In The Bee's Letter Box of H. Fischer's reply to D. C. John is typical of a German. He says the allies may starve Germany, but will never conquer it. His best plan would be to sit quietly and "wait and see." England did not want the war with Germany, but as the kaiser's military advisers thought they could fight the world they took upon themselves to break the neutrality of poor Belgium as an easy way to get at France and march to Parts in sixteen days. Thanks to the plucky Belgians the Germans' long-planned sixteen days' march to Paris failed.

If Germans are a peace loving people, why all this preparation for war, and why did Germany dictate the ultimatum from Austria to Servia? Why does Germany require a large navy? Is there any reason why Germany should have such a navy? None whatever, any more than the other European powers. J. CROOKS.

A Note of Appreciation.

OMAHA, Oct. 3.-To the Editor of The Bee: We all like praise and compliments when we have said or done anything noteworthy. Were we more free with a cheering word now and then there would he less call for sympathy. Editors have many hot shots fired at them during the course of a year, but, nevertheless, they are human, and, I presume, are not immune from praise any more than the rest

Allow me to compliment you for your excellent editorial "Boys raght the World's Wars." It is only four short paragraphs, but is the most appealing article I have read on the subject of war since the inaugurating of the present

Better had the economists turned their esiculations to the figuring out of a means of escape for the fighting children than causing furrows in their brows by tabulations of the cost of war in dollars and cents; for there are child-soldiers in the field today. Better had The Hague conference insisted upon only men fighting the world's war than to fret over the use of dum-dum bullets.

Children in war, past, present or future! It's a mockery upon civilization! E. C. W.

Political Tips

St. Paul Pioneer Press: In more than one state besides Maine the progressive may point to the result and exclaim jubilantly and ungrammatically: "I done it." Philadelphia Press: It is just like the democrats, after taking the tariff off forsign commerce as far as they could, to go and try to make it up by taxing do-

Kansas City Journal: Seattle has been trying municipal ownership of street railways, and has lost money heavily, without improving the service. Some reforms work out so much better in theory than

Germany's Crown Prince

The warlike tendencies of Germany's crown prince have in the past been represented as a source of much embarrassment to his father, who, apparently, was most desious of building up a peaceful reputation for Germany. But now Prince Frederick William's firebrand policies, as well as his absolute devotion to the German army and the militarist idea, have stood him in good stead, and, combined with his undoubted valor upon the field, have won for the coveted Iron Cross and the frank commendations of the emperor. The New York Times quotes, in discussion of the militarist prince, a book, entitled "Der Kronprinz" by one Dr. Paul Liman of Berlin, which gives an excellent idea of the young man. Dr. Liman has endeavored to explain the prince to his people, reconciling his sometimes rather puzzling eccentricities with the character and mentality of one destined to be Germany's future ruler. His view of the prince is particularly interesting just now, as it was written with the firm belief that Frederick William as kaiser would one day become involved in the same sort of struggle that exists

Dr. Liman paints an attractive portrait of the kalser's heir. In spite of all his vagaries, we learn that he is popular throughout Germany, totally dewold of "side," and the keepest sort of a sportsman. Moreover, and this is less known, we hear of him as a diligent reader of books, especially on history and as a warm admirer of Napoleon, despite the fact that the great Corsican humbled Germany to the dust in his campaigns.

In his endeavor to show the crown prince as he really is, Dr. Liman has not forgotten the book on his hunting experiences which the kaiser's heir published a couple of years ago. In its pages, he says, the prince appear to us quite without vanity or literary frills, without the craving for noisy ac-

The hunting-book was written after the crown prince's journey to the far east. It describes times junting in India and Ceylon and all sorts of exciting experiences in far away lands, but the young hunter does not forget the countless expeditions that he has undertaken within the boundaries of his native Germany, and which form an important part of his regular round of existence. And it is in describing these that much of his real nature rises to the surface, as, for instance, in these sentences:

"We hunters pity from the bottom of our hearts those men to whom hunting game in some form or other is impossible or unknown. And when I say hunting, I really mean stalking. To my mind, whosoever thinks at all of hunting-that wonderful combination of fighting, enjoyment of nature, and selfcontemplation-is thinking in reality only of stalking, and recognizes things like a tiger hunt only as a sort of exercise in shooting, by no means as anything truly sportsmanlike.

"To the real sportsman the great book of beautiful nature opens itself willingly. In the brilliant sunrise, in the tired, silent midday sleep, in the soft evening which spreads peace over forest and field, in the wild, howling mountain storm, the voice of nature speaks to us solitary huntamen in accents always different and always impressive, and sings to us the noble song of the Creator.

Such hours, spent alone * * * only they make life on earth worth living! For beauty and peacefulness many an evening of hunting that I have enjoyed is, in my opinion, surpassed by nothing in the world. How often during those evenings have I thought of these words inscribed by the Grand Mogula over their palace in Agra: 'If there is a Paradise on earth it is here, it is here." 'Nothing binds friends so closely as hunting experiences which they have shared. When at night the flames are flickering in the fireplace, when happy sportsmen are stretched out in big leather chairs, cigarets between their lips, eyes giancing toward the trophies on the wall, reminding each other of 'how we stalked the deer together that time,' then it is that genuine comradeship is engendered. Dr. Lyman calls this a "free, honest confession," and it is indeed the confession of one whose instinct and love for the hunt might well breed in him a passion for that greater, more thrilling hunting pastime-war and the hunting of men. At all events, the crown prince has ever been on the side of the army. From the preface of the prince's book dealing with the army and navy, "Germany in Arms," few lines show how ardently the author embraced the cause:

"We are living in a time when men proudly point to their culture, a time which is but too willing to plume itself on its cosmopolitanism and takes pleasure in dreaming idle dreams of the possibility of eternal peace.

"Such a conception of life is un-German. It is not for us. The German, who loves his country, who believes in its greatness and future, and does not wish to see any lessening of its prestige, will not close his eyes in such dreams, not allow himself to he lulled to sleep by the peace lullaby of the Utopians.

"If the German people decide to risk life and property in a war, then let the world be full of devils and rise against us in arms; we can handle it. no matter how great the peril of the hour!"

Like his father, who has dabbled in the fine arts. his helr also has tried his hand at composing music and painting pictures. But, avers Dr. Liman, he is not at all conceited about his productions. When he has finished a picture he smilingly inquires of those privileged to see it whether they can guess what it represents-a snowy landscape or a negro chieftain, still life, or a battle scene.

But such activities are merely secondary; first and foremost the young man is a soldier. "He does his duty just like any one of his comrades, from early morning until the moment when the rest of his fellow officers are relieved. And sometimes even he stays behind a couple of hours to listen to the instructions of superior officers, cheerfully observing: 'Oh, my wife will send me some sandwiches and a half bottle of wine."

People and Events

Phillip D. Armour, grandson of the founder of Armour & Co., is taking his first practical lessons in the business by tramping around in the mud of the Chicago stock yards as a cattle buyer.

Some chronics persist in the notion that the European war lords handed a lemon to Ulicle Sam. Well, what if they did? Your Uncle knows how to compound a lemonade and put a stick in it.

A Frenchman and a German in Sioux City bat tled valorously for the smiles of a pretty Irish waitreas. Both signed a treaty of peace before the police judge, but the German was forced to retreat to a hospital.

The court of appeals of New York has said the last word in the case of Mrs. B. C. Pelxotto, the New York school teacher dismissed for absenting herself from school to become a mother. The court sustains the right of the school board to enforce the rule.

Mrs. Jane Seymour Barnett of St. Louis, recently deceased, served as a nurse in the Crimean war with Florence Nightingale. She survived two husbands, both British captains of artillery, and has three grandsons in the ranks of the British forces in France.

How quick the pocket nerve regulates the view point! A group of fifteen Americans from Alabama stood outside a closed hotel in Paris, the second night of the war, discussing where to go and how to get there. Another tourist, gazing up and down deserted streets, was attracted by the language of the group. 'Hello, Uncle Sam, what's the trouble?" 'The leader of the party stepped up to the tourist and remarked; "I'm from Alabama-where do you hall from?" 'I'm from Bill Bryan's state." "Shake." he exclaimed, extending his Dixle fist. He was mighty sore about the war and nursed a grouch against the Germans. "I hope they'll be licked to a dead finish. have the Germans done to me? A great deal. Our people get all our potash from Germany. We had a five-year contract. The Germans thought it was unprofitable and wanted us to break it. We refused Then they induced the government to impose an export tax. We had to pay it about $10,000 a year, which was turned over to the potash dealers. You bet I want to see them licked, good and plenty. Having thus eased his mind, he vanished in the dark-

In Official Quarters

Milwaukes Sentinel: Go to the fourth line of battle, Mr. High Taxer, and watch a state run in a business way

Springfield Republican: It is a good while since anybody in Europe has sneered at the idealism of Dr. Wilson.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: Many a democratic senator will henceforth be unable to look a pork barrel in the face without blushing.

Indianapolis News: Those reductions made in the river and harbor bill appear to be just about as ridiculous as some of the appropriations.

Washington Star: Mr. Bryan now the doom of monarchy in his speech at Baltimore, but the monarche had beat to have a hard time raising money without incurring the wrath of the people. Boston Transcript: The report that the S. S. Dolphin has left West Point with sort of Joyriding is strictly forbidden in the Jeffersonian manual. Washington Herald: Secretary Bryan says the war era has ended in the United Dame Fashion was in sorry straits. States and is drawing toward its close in foreign lands. While everybody will earnestly hope that the secretary is right. it is difficult to discover any sound reason for believing it.

MIRTHFUL REMARKS.

DOMESTIC PLEASANTRIES.

"Faint heart ne'er won fair lady," quoted Mrs. Gabb, as she tossed aside the magazine she was reading.
"Some guys have all the luck," growled Mr. Gabb,—Cincinnati Enquirer.

You might at least treat him decent when he calls."
"I treat him as decently as he has any right to expect!"
"You have a grudge against him just because I came near marrying him before I met you."

"It isn't that, dear. He doesn't come here for a thing on earth but to gloat over me."—Houston Post.

"You must promise me one thing before I will consent to marry you."
"Anything!"
"You must spend as many evenings with me after we are married as you do now."
—Houston Post.

"Do you believe that we shall ever have

"My daughter is an exceptionally elever "How so?"
"She makes all her pin money with her needle."—Baltimore American.

"Your daughter plays some very robust knows how the gold democrats of 1835 must have felt when he reads the returns from the Illinois primaries.

Chicago Herald: Mr. Bryan sounded the dishes."—Pittsburgh Post.

"What is the mail from daughter?" Baltimore, but the monarchs had beat sked mother, easerly.

Baltimore American: In view of the failure of the tariff, democracy is going to wash and mend."—Kansas City Journal.

"Saw a very painful sight this mora-ing," remarked the athletic boarder. "What was that?"
"An old man trying to teach his beauti-Mrs. Josephus Daniels and party must be book of instruction to her from the short of lovelding is well known that this shore."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Else why did she to back, I asque. To old Methuselah's back yard And dig us up that ancient basque.

Dame Fashion is a tyrant bold. But as a tyrent, has a tasque Of Herculean size if she E'er hopes to make me wear a basque She'll have to chloroform me, yes— To pour it down me from a flasque-

Reduce me to unconsciousness E'er she can put on me a basque. I might have worn a trouserette-(I could also have worn a masque)- and kept my reason but not so.

If I should don a hideous basque Let dum-dum bullets end my life, Then let them put me in a casque;
But never, here I draw the line,
Let them dare clothe me in a basque
Omaha. —BAYOLL NE TRELE.

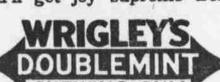

CHEWING GUM DOUBLE STRENGTH PEPPERMINT FLAVOR DOUBLE WRAPPED-ALWAYS FRESH AND CLEAN AND

"Pep-Peppermint"

Stutter when you say it and get in two "Peps"-for this is double strength Peppermint chewing gum-lots of Pep!

It's like a Peppermint Lozenge with a long lease of life - it 1-a-s-t-s!

You'll get joy supreme from

-and more good news:

With each 5c package (of 5 big sticks) is a United Profit-Sharing Coupon-good towards a long list of valuable presents.

Give the whole family a treat and start them saving coupons.

Bigger Business

is attracted to those who seize opportunity vigorously. Western Union Day and Night Letters show business vigor and are expressions of modern methods. Their cost is small.

THE WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH CO.

Full information gladly given at any Western Union office