Haller of Omaha, the principal address in English. Dr. Edward L. Durant of Burlington, Ia., president of the Iowa German-American alliance, presented the compliments of the alliance of his state, and praised the work being done for the Red Cross societies in the war sone. He declared it the duty of all to give what they could to this great work.

Fighting for Self Preservation. "We have not as present the least intention to seek out the dark Hagen who released the war," said Mr. Soergel in addressing the audience in German.

Yet woe, thrice woe unto him who shall be branded before the world-tribunal as the instigator! With its fange the fury has gripped Germany, who by a heroic struggle is trying to free herself. She is carrying on the war not for the glorification of her throne, but for self preservation and the conservation of her cultural achievements. But the brooding powers are seeking to darken that which radiant. As in Germanic mythology and folkiore, darkness is not able permannently to gain the upper hand over light, so we hope in this world struggle that light will eventually emerge triumphant. We are in no sense advocates of the war. As loyal American citizens we support the attitude of our government in this world struggle and heartily endorse the efforts of our president to establish peace, As American citizens of German deacent our sympathy in this war belongs with the German people. We believe we understand the endeavors of modern Germany and, therefore venture the assertion: 'Her thoughts were free from murder.' Far be it from us to expect the same feelings from all American citizens. However we regret very much that a large portion of the Anglo-American press has sought, and in a measure is still seeking either to brand Germany as the instigator of the world war, or at least and often contrary to better knowledge, to create sentiment against her. If the press stands on the side of darkness, then the words so aptly applied to that Germanic offshoot north of the channel must Boosters.
