ALLIES PUSH LINE OF BATTLE NORTH OF THE OISE RIVER

current events from the front several days ago and it probably will so continue until Sir John French, the commander of the British expeditionary force, puts his army in motion again.
The retention of the Paris official communication last night was even more marked than customary. It furnished no inkling of what had happened after the Germans had forced the French to yield ground at certain points on the all-important western wing.

It is argued here that these intermittent retreats are inevitable and not necessarily important in such a hard-fought combat throughout which given positions are taken and retaken and taken again many times.

That the allies, for the moment, possess greater mobility than their foes, seems to be indicated by the news that they have been able to raid the German lines of communication, cut a railroad and destroy a train belonging to the artillery of the German Imperial Guard.

As the enormous wastage in horse progresses, it is claimed for the allies that their possibilities for such movements will increase, while those of their opponents decrease. German cavalrymen on bicycles already are a common sight and the Russian advance, which is cutting Germany off from the horse-producing districts of Hungary, must, if maintained, further increase the shortage in remounts.

Lid On in the East Also.

Even the small relief afforded by the news of great activity in the east sent out yesterday has ceased today, and the censorship has extended to the region where, throughout the war, news of the military operations have been more accessible than in any other theater of the warfare.

Victory for one side or the other along the Russian frontier is of supreme importance, and the tremendous battle impending there may mark the climax of the war.

The military experts are beginning to appreciate the fact that the attacks now being made on either flank of the western army are not entirely turning movements which depend for their effectiveness on speed and surprise. Little evidence of either has been shown on the allies' left.

If, however, the Russians win a great victory in the east it will compel the Germans to divert some of their western armies in that direction, and the flank movements will become crushing attacks which will crumple up the depleted German lines.

On the other hand, if the Russians are the victims of a severe reverse some of the veteran German corps will be released for service in the west, and the Germans may pierce the numerically inferior allied line. Which ever side can extend its line furthest without weakening its front ought, according to the experts, to win the battle of the Aisne. Hence the crucial importance of the battle on the Russian border.

The battle line along the Russian border is not continuous, but the intervals separating the various armies are comparatively small, and the whole territory along the frontier from Tilsit, on the northeast border of Prussia, to Dukla pass in the Carpathians bristles with arms.

No battle front extends beyond Dukla pass, but small mobile Russian forces are harrying the plains of Hungary. The longest continuous Russian line extends from Dukla pass to a point almost on the Vistula river a short distance from Warsaw. This is composed of the armies which swept over Galicia and is now the instrument of the projected invasion of Silesia.

Message from Ship Lost in Superior Found in Bottle

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Oct. 6.—"November 9, 1912, steamer Leafbird. No hope; farewell to all; in God we trust." The above message, signed "Officer," was found today in a bottle on the shore of Lake Superior, near here, half buried in the sand. The steamer Leafbird, of the Algoma Central Steamship line, was lost during the great storm of November 9, last. It was carrying a full cargo of steel rails from Sault Ste Marie to Port William. None of its crew ever reached land.

where they succeeded in destroying the French gunboat Zelea.

Powers' Attempt Fails.
"The attempts of the powers composing the triple entente to enforce the opening of the Dardanelles have failed. The Russian ambassador at Constantinople, as described as being furious on account of the embargo placed on the exportation of Russian grain and on the importation of arms.

"The increased Turkish navy, it is expected, soon will be sailing in the Black sea. The Turkish press is advising attacks on England because of the suppression of the Khedivial rights in Egypt.

"A neutral correspondent behind the French front in the department of the Marne estimates that the fugitive civilian population in northern France numbers 36,000,000 and that these persons are in great distress."

ELECTRIC PARADE TONIGHT TO MARK ADVENT OF KING

his daring and skill. Before ascending, Beachey had said he would enter the clouds, if he could find any within reasonable distance.

Thousands to Boom Welcome.
Thousands of his loyal subjects rejoicing in the season's bumper crops and prosperity, have come in from the outlying districts of the realm. With the city dwellers and many more of the king's minions, who will arrive today, they will line the streets and shout with joy at the advent of the new monarch, one of the grandest events in the fall festival. As he nears the crest of municipal hill on his gorgeous royal float, he will halt before the city hall in the brilliant light of the "welcome" arch, and receive the golden key to Cibola from Mayor James C. Dahlman, who will voice the greetings of the assembled multitude.

The entry of the king will be beautiful beyond compare. For months the royal artificer, Gus Renze, assisted by an army of helpers, has striven to exceed all previous pageants, in order that the floats of tonight's parade may harmonize with the increased glory and importance of the house of Ak-Sar-Ben. Many thousands of vari-colored electric lights will illuminate the big wagons, each a burst of bright hues and wonderful adornments. Twenty floats, all masterpieces of the artificer's handicraft, will comprise the glorious spectacle. The king himself will sit on the first, with vassals of the court humbly attending him. Following him will come the title float, "Pictures from the Book of Ages."

Stories from Old Testament.
The garden of Eden, the deluge, Jacob, Joseph, Moses, the children of Israel in the wilderness, Canaan, Jericho, Solomon, Elijah, Samson and Delilah, David and Goliath, Daniel and other characters and incidents of the old testament will be vividly presented. As story after story from the ancient book is pictured before the throngs, in beautiful and enchanting style, the impressive caravan will emphasize the grandeur of the new ruler and the coming splendor of his reign. At the same time the pageant will celebrate the bountiful harvest just completed, and the superb accomplishments of Ak-Sar-Ben's dynasty.

Many bands will intersperse the long line, to sound to heaven the glory of the king's approach and give appropriate setting to the proclamation of his accession to the throne. An excerpt of Quivera's Exultant throngs of his willing subjects will line the streets and welcome his appearance, while in front of the pageant will ride the twelve chief knights of the realm, the governors of Ak-Sar-Ben, at once guiding the king through the city of his triumphant coronation, and presenting him to the people as their new ruler.

To handle the unprecedented crowds that are expected to view the parade, the entire police force will be on duty this evening, and the street car company will run every available car, a total of 350, before and after the pageant. The theaters will hold their performances until the floats pass their doors.

After the gorgeous spectacle is over, the scene of activity will be transferred to the King's Highway, where merry revelers will depart themselves until the grounds are closed for the night. Extra ticket sellers will be on hand to wait on the crowds.

Clear Weather Predicted.
Clear weather is predicted for the parade, after Monday night's heavy rain, which is thought to have emptied the heavens of any lurking moisture that might otherwise have tended to mar the safety of the festival.

Starting at 8 o'clock from Sixteenth and Cumby streets, the electric parade will proceed south on Sixteenth to Howard street; east on Howard to Fourteenth; north on Fourteenth to Douglas; east on Douglas to Tenth; south on Tenth to Farnam; west on Farnam to Nineteenth; south on Nineteenth to Harney; east on Harney to Fifteenth; north on Fifteenth to Capitol avenue, at which corner it will disband.

The big fraternal parade, the daylight pageant of Ak-Sar-Ben's fall festival, will take place tomorrow morning, starting at 2 o'clock. A somewhat different line of march has been arranged for it.

The rain of last night put the country roads in a condition so that the number of Ak-Sar-Ben visitors coming by automobiles was reduced very materially and as a result, the steam roads noted the difference in the volume of the travel into the city.

On all the roads coming from Iowa and Nebraska there were large crowds of people in on both the early and later trains. All of the trains carried extra coaches and many of them were crowded so that passengers coming from within a radius of fifty miles were forced to stand.

Road passengers' men assert that the crowds coming to the city today were the largest of any carnival day, leaving the parade days out of consideration.

A Responsive Fuel

Vulcan responds to the touch of the draft like a well-trained horse to the rein. The reason is simple—Vulcan is a more concentrated, not a more condensed fuel. It does not settle and cake in the fire-box like coal, thus preventing a draft through the fuel-body. Opening the draft on a coal fire is often like opening a faucet on a clogged pipe—nothing happens until the pressure is great enough to blow out the obstruction—until heat enough is generated to burn the whole mass of fuel. This is wasteful.

Try Vulcan Coke and see the difference—anybody can manage it, it has no peculiarities to take into consideration. It costs less than hard coal, and wherever Anthracite is good, Vulcan is better.
