Dress as Knights of Old. board of governors formed a body guard of cavaliers in the brilliant costumes of the knights of 1630. The knights Fore coatumes of various colors of satin and brocade.

At the solemn moment as the king took his place upon the throne, the governors sheathed their swords, broke into groups of threes and nonchalantly snuntered across the castle hall to the south and east entrances, respectively.

Again they united returned and formed smselves into a semi-circle or crescent behind the throne. It was then that the queen entered with her attendants, passed with befitting dignity along the richly decorated hall, ascended the broad and seply-carpeted stair and took her place

Governor Meets King.

The board of governors at once stepped forward, made their obelsance to the queen and king and stepped back. Mayor James C. Dahlman of the chief city of Cibola then approached from the main entrance, escorting Governor L. H. Morehead, civil ruler of the realm of Ak-Sar-The governor was introduced to the king and queen, and, after making his obelsance, retired to one side to let the knights and ladies of the realm approach to pay their respects to the new

From all sides of the castle hall came the brave knights and lovely ladies to pay their respects and touch the hand or the robe of royalty. For the spell of many happy heart throbs this ceremony continued, when in joyous strains befitting the festivities, the great orchestra clashed forth with a world of music, and the coronation ball was on.

Children of Royalty.

Daughters and sons of royal families attended the king and queen as pages during the ceremonies. Little Virginia Barker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Barker, carried the crown of the king. Her father is a former king of Ak-Sar-Ben. Fred Nash, jr., son of F. A. Nash; Edward Nash, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Nash, is a nephew to a former ceen, Miss Frances Nash. They carried the king's robe. Miss Eleanor Kountse, and Miss Barbara Burns, two more of the little attendants of the queen, are also related to the royal blood of the Ak-Sar-Ben line.
