Welcome White Flag. Such a crowd gathered around the car while we waited that the burgomaster came on the steps of the hall and said that the appearance of the Germans must not frighten the people. I told him of my conversation with the commander at Antwerp and he at once informed the people they could safely return home. His news was received with loud cheers. "We continued our journey to Putten and encountered two streams of refugees, one flying from Antwerp and the other already returning, so that our progress was slow. Many of them were very glad when they saw the white flag crying that peace had come. "In the distance we saw a solitary Belgian soldier come out of a house and look at the Germans with eyes full of hatred. a we approached he sprang on a hike and dashed off. We saw many other solitary Belgian soldiers in the distance and the lieutenant seemed very sorry that he could not arrest them as he was motoring under a white flag.

"Antwerp is now a strange city of silence. Streets, avenues, quays and stations all are curiously empty and only here and there do you see citizens scuffling along the pavement to dive in the cellar of some house. Food is short in Antwerp, gas and water works mostly destroyed, and all means of communications with the outer world has been cut out. Motor cars laden with food are arriving here."

Exports of Lead to Europe Increasing Since War Started

WASHINGTON. Oct. 18 .- Domestic lead, the exports of which heretofore have been virtually a negligible quantity. has now become an important factor in the foreign trade of the United States. according to the Department of Commerce today. The total exports of domestic lead in ore from March to August, 1914, inclusive, aggregated 72,750,000 pounds, valued at $2,810,000. This is the first record of any such exports. During the four months ending with June, 40,000,-009 pounds of domestic lead were shipped. 15,000,000 pounds were shipped, 18,000,000 pounds to England, 10,000.000 to Germany, 9,500.000 to the Netherlands, 4,500,000 pounds to Belgium, 1,000,000 to Scotland and smaller amounts to Russia and other countries.

For many years practically all the exports of lead have been reshipments of Mexican lead in bullion and ore, with smaller amounts from Germany, England, Canada, South Africa and German Africa.

Coincidentally with the exportation of domestic lead, imports began to fall off. Usually the imports of lead in Oregon and base bullion from Mexico have been large, having steadily been maintained at a level above 180,000,000 pounds annually until June 20, 1913. The fiscal year which ended with June last, however, showed a drop of 44.500,000 pounds and other imports correspondingly decreased.
