RYDER FINDS OMAHA BETTER OFF THAN MOST CITIES

Omaha has a great advantage in being a city where foodstuffs, such as meat, grain and manufactured foods, form a large part of the output, says City Comissioner J. J. Ryder. In his recent trip o the convention of the League of American Municipalities at Milwaukee and his subsequent visit to eastern cities, he found that in most cities where the manufacture of goods for export is the chief industry, business was very dull, while the war and resultant decline in business activity had not materially affected industry in Omaha, because the products
