

USING AUTOS TO CHASE BULL

Policemen Terrorize New York East Side Before Antoinette Is Killed.

Suburber packing house in New York and ran like mad from Forty-fifth street and First avenue to Seventy-fifth street and Avenue A before one of the thirty shots fired by policemen laid him low.

cattle herders, while hundreds of persons scampers out of the animal's way and two were bowled over in the street.

Other patrolmen joined the chase in commandeered cars. Patrolman Warren F. Keating, at Fifty-sixth street and First avenue, took up the chase in a car belonging to a well-dressed woman, who took great delight in the adventure.

The Queensboro bridge the bull charged for the public market. Men shouted and women screamed. This frightened the bull and he changed his course up First avenue again, where, passing under the bridge approach at Sixtieth street, he knocked down a young man who rolled half way across the street. At Seventy-first street a pushcart laden with fruit and a woman were knocked down. At Seventy-fifth street the pursuing machines caught up with the animal. Patrolman Keating led the policemen in firing at the animal. One bullet found its way to the bull's brain and he fell dead.—New York Sun.
