

RUSSIANS HURL THE GERMANS BACK

Attack on Warsaw Falls Because of Inability to Bring Up Heavy Guns.

ALL THE ROADS IMPASSABLE

Official Reports Indicate Germans Thoroughly Beaten in This Campaign and Unable to Make Progress.

PETROFAD (via London), Oct. 19.

After fighting their way to within five miles of Warsaw the Germans were hurled back with heavy losses owing to the inability of the artillery to follow up and support their advance guard, according to advices received here.

The backwardness of the artillery is due to the practically impassable conditions of the country as a result of four days' continuous rain. The ground between Warsaw and Skieniewiec, Lowicz and Kutno, being flat and marshy, cannon immediately sinks or freezes, making an immediate advance impossible.

The situation of the German forces, as gathered from the official reports, is about as follows, on the Russian frontier. The German army from East Prussia, now near Mlawa, is intercepted in its effort to pass through Plotoch to Warsaw by marching the fortress of Novo Georgiewsk, the Thorn-Poznan force are following the left bank of the Vistula and have occupied the Kutno-Lowicz district, while the Silesian army is beleaguering Ivangorod and extends to Sandomir.

The latest details of the fighting on the Vistula as announced by the war office say that the Germans were thoroughly beaten and that hundreds of German prisoners have been taken into Warsaw. In the center the fighting consisted chiefly of artillery duels.

Five Days' Fighting.

Between Josefow and Ivangorod the battle continued for nearly five days. Near Josefow the Russian commander, it is stated, learned that the Germans were preparing to cross the Vistula. He exploded some guns about seventeen miles from his bank of the river to make the Germans believe that the position was the Russian front.

During the night, according to the official version, Russian infantry with four quick fliers hid in the dense bushes near the river, while some distance back sixteen field guns were concealed. A German aeroplane flew over the spot next morning, but the aviator perceived nothing and the Germans began crossing the river on rafts.

The Russians allowed two battalions of Germans to land, preceded by a detachment of sappers to prepare a landing place, which was within 100 to 200 yards of the concealed Russian guns.

Ends in Bayonet Attack.

The Russians then opened a gun and rifle fire which, it is asserted, accounted for nearly every man across the river. The German losses being well over 2,000. The affair ended in a bayonet attack.

The Germans on the opposite side of the river could not fire without the risk of killing their own men. Russian quick fliers mowed down the men packed on the rafts, and many of those who jumped into the river and tried to swim ashore were killed by rifle fire.

At an unmentioned place southward of Warsaw, the official report says, the Russians and Germans strove simultaneously to cross the river. The Russians succeeded under a terrible squall of fire, suffering heavy casualties, but eventually they silenced the German guns and repulsed the German division covering the crossing. Apparently, the report concludes, the Russian heavy field guns outranged those of the Germans.

Today was "lobocoo day" in Petrograd, large quantities of the luxury being contributed by the populace for the soldiers at the front.

German Efforts Fail.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—All the Austro-German attempts to force the passage of the Vistula have thus far failed, and the enemy have been compelled everywhere to assume the defensive, says a Petrograd dispatch to the Daily Telegraph.

They appear, however, to have retired in good order and are likely to make a stubborn fight in prepared positions before allowing themselves to be driven off Russian soil.

"With an enormous mass of artillery the Germans kept up a terrific bombardment, which ceased neither day nor night. Under cover of this fire numerous attempts were made on the 18th and 19th to throw pontoons across the river. According to one report, bridging detachments were working at no less than eighteen different points. They were everywhere repulsed and large quantities of bridging materials were destroyed."

GERMANS BRING UP BIG GUNS

Make Almost Superhuman Efforts to Capture Fortresses that Bar Entrance to France from Metz.

FROM THE BATTLE FRONT, Oct. 18 (via Paris), Oct. 19.—What in previous wars would have been called great battles were fought today on the eastern wing of the fighting line stretching from the Belgian coast to Switzerland.

In this great battle of nations, however, these fights are regarded merely as incidents. The fighting always has been of the most fierce nature in this district, owing to the strenuous efforts of the Germans to obtain possession of the strong fortresses of Verdun, Toul and Epinal in order to open a way from Metz into France.

At Die, on the Meurthe, thirty-two miles northeast of Epinal, was the center of today's attacks, which resulted in a repulse for the Germans with heavy casualties. The borders of both Alsace and Lorraine, also felt the shock of battle and in the Vosges, the famous French Alpine regions were in contact with German columns. These mountaineers continually kept the Germans busy by utilizing their remarkable mountain guns and baffling their efforts to drive them out.

Line to Colmar Cut. Their greatest achievement in the recent operations was the cutting off of railroad communications between Colmar, capital of Upper Alsace, and Mulhouse, Prussia, thereby increasing the difficulties of the Germans in sending their wounded to the rear and bringing up supplies.

The Germans have brought up ten-inch mortars in this district, supposedly for an intended eventual siege of Belfort. In view of this possibility, the French have renewed their attacks from the south and again advanced beyond Altkirch. A great part of the theater of operations in southern Alsace is illuminated at night by forest fires along the Swiss frontier caused by shells falling across the border.

Along the entrenched line where the armies have been face to face for six weeks, nothing beyond a desultory bombardment occurred today, but farther north, on the western wing, where the German efforts to break the allies' line have been unsuccessful, the fighting still continues.

Daring Feat of Infantrymen. During a dense fog which overhung the battle line, hindering operations on both sides, a section of French infantry, under cover of the fog, recently made a dash on the Germans on the Soume river, surprising the men in the trenches and annihilating the first line with the bayonet.

The Frenchmen pursued their advantage but fell into the hands of a reserve battalion of German infantry, who captured all of them. The fog thickened and prevented the Germans from moving, and they formed a hollow square around the prisoners and stacked their arms to await the clearing of the atmosphere. The Germans then bivouacked and absolute silence reigned for some time. Then a voice rang out from among the prisoners. The voice, comrades! Every Frenchman there rose and rushed to the stacks of guns, the butts of which could be seen beneath the fog. The German commander and a dozen men who were standing guard tried to resist the French, but fell under their own bayonets, and the entire German battalion, dazed by the onslaught, surrendered. The French took them back to the French lines after the fog lifted.

On another part of the line, where 300 Germans were well entrenched in the quarries, the French general called for 300 Turco volunteers. During the night the Algerians, discarding their rifles, crept in with bayonets between their teeth and surprised the Germans, of whom only eight escaped.

Turcos Make Assault. The number of spies in the war zone seems undiminished and there are frequent accusations of them, particularly in the east. Recently a German colonel and a captain appeared in a French camp dressed in the uniform of French privates. They said they had been separated from their regiment and requested to be permitted to serve at the front in another command. They replied without accent to all questions and their identity was revealed only when they claimed to know the commander of the regiment to which they had applied for service. They said they had seen the commander at a certain place, but the commander had not having there, the spies were forced to admit that they were German officers. They were shot.

PICKPOCKETS HELD FOR CARNIVAL AGAIN AT WORK. Half a dozen professional-pickpockets, known to the Omaha police through records from other cities, are still in Omaha, causing the police much difficulty. These men were arrested during the carnival and held as "suspicious characters."

Police Magistrate Foster, despite the evidence presented by the arresting officers, turned them all loose when vagrancy complaints were filed.

Since they have been at liberty the pickpockets have been beating farmers out of money on the old coin matching game and selling automobiles not their own. Police officials say that if they can find the pickpockets again they will take them before a justice of the peace if Foster refuses to hold them.
