

IN TORTURE WITH ECZEMA ON HANDS

Itching Burning. Had No Rest Anywhere. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Eczema Healed.

Grygala, Minn.—"For about two years I suffered with eczema on both of my hands. At first it appeared in the form of pin-head sized vesicles filled with fluid and caused me torture with itching and burning. I had no rest anywhere. The itching and burning were so bad that I scratched. My hands were very bad.

I got some Cuticura Soap and ointment, but they did no good. I read the advertisement of the Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I decided to send for some for trial. After using them a few times I got relief. I bought seventy-five cents worth of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and followed the directions given for eczema and was cured." (Signed) J. M. Langson, Mar. 24, 1914.

RASH ON FACE AND HEAD 318 W. 26th St., Marion, Ind.—"My baby was two weeks old when he had an awful breaking out on his face and head. It came like a rash and itched and burned so he did not sleep hardly a minute. The eczema looked like chicken-pox and pained him awfully. Then I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in a week or two it was well, not a pimple left." (Signed) Mrs. Mizelle Clark, Jan. 26, 1914.

Samples Free by Mail Although Cuticura Soap (25c) and Cuticura Ointment (50c) are sold throughout the world, a sample of each with 25¢ of Cuticura Book will be sent free upon request. Add dress-post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

ECHOES OF THE ANTE ROOM

John Huss Castle at Council Bluffs Entertains Others.

WORKMEN TO HAVE MEETINGS

Knights of Pythias Will Initiate a Number of Candidates Into the Lodge Next Wednesday Evening.

On last Wednesday evening John Huss castle No. 31, at Council Bluffs, held a largely attended and most pleasant session. The degree team, assisted by Special Deputy J. E. Starbuck of Omaha, exemplified the long form work on a large class of refugees from Canton.

Among the visitors present was Special Deputy W. P. Hellings of Fremont, who is always a welcome visitor in John Huss castle and who gave a short talk during the meeting. Large delegations were present from Covington castle and Ferris castle of Omaha, Dundee castle of South Omaha and Kenwood castle of Fremont.

On next Wednesday evening Ferris castle No. 48 will give a card party and a large class of refugees from Canton, Dodge streets, to which all friends of the castle have been invited. Arrangements are being made for a social time to be given by Covington castle No. 74 on Thanksgiving night, to which all members and friends will be invited.

Woodmen of the World.

South Omaha comp No. 211 held an enthusiastic meeting last Wednesday evening. A large representation of Woodmen were present, and an organization formed to boost Woodcraft in South Omaha. Prizes were offered to the camp making the largest increase in membership before February 1, 1915.

Apa camp No. 1, Omaha, is enjoying its new quarters in Baright's hall, Nineteenth and Farnam streets. Its meetings are largely attended, and great results are expected from this live and active camp. In promoting Woodcraft in Omaha, Omaha Seymour camp No. 16 gave a special initiation ceremony at its hall in the Board of Trade building. The officers and drill team had made special preparations for this initiation, and all present spoke in highest praise of the efficiency, and thoroughness with which the work was done.

Invalid is Saved From Burning House

Frank O'Neil, 59 years old and an invalid, was badly burned, but escaped with his life, when his home at 2533 North Forty-eighth street caught fire. D. M. Sloan, a neighbor, saw the fire and hurried over in time to carry O'Neil from bed. O'Neil's feet were badly blistered. The fire loss amounted to about $600.

MRS. CARRIE P. ALLEN LAID AT REST IN FOREST LAWN

Mrs. Carrie P. Allen, wife of H. H. Allen, 423 Farnam street, who died Wednesday, was laid to rest in Forest Lawn cemetery Saturday afternoon. Funeral services were conducted at the family residence by L. B. McCoun, pastor in the Christian Scientist by J. W. Miller, N. O. Talbot, George M. Entrikin, James B. Woolan, Brower McCaughey and J. A. Driscoll.

CITY GIVEN RIGHTS TO STREETS IN ADDITION

District Judge A. L. Sutton has handed down a decree, affirming title to the city of Omaha in boulevards, streets and alleys in the First addition to Institute place. As originally platted a quarter of a century ago, the addition was to be city lots, with the streets deeded to the city. Later the addition was purchased by John E. and Mary E. Parry, who decided to turn it into acreage. They filed a paper, vacating the original plat and claiming ownership of the ground originally designated for streets and alleys. To preserve the city's title to these, the city attorney brought suit and won it.

Salesman Finds Plenty Business in the Middle West

"The company pulled twenty-three salesmen off the road in the last four months, and yet I have in that time had the greatest business I have ever had," said Miles Kline, traveling for a lithographic advertising novelty house of Washington, D. C., when in Omaha. "How do you account for your increase in sales when the company considers business so bad as to call off twenty-three salesmen?" he was asked.

"I travel through this middle west," he replied, "and there is just no use talking. This is the greatest territory I and I am seeking to this territory. There is always business here in Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota, and these agricultural states immediately adjoining. The people here have money all the time and believe me I am always glad to get into this territory."

Fire Captain Dead After Short Illness

Thomas Rocheford, captain of No. 3 company of the fire department, and for more than sixteen years a member of the city's fire-fighting brigade, is dead at his home, 319 Mason street, following an illness of two days.

Captain Rocheford was one of the best known members of the department, and possessed an enviable record, both for executive ability and bravery. Two children and three step children, besides his widow, mother and brother, survive.

Dog and Cat Cause of Neighborhood Row

Mrs. Richard Tizard, 20 North Twenty-third street, owns a cat, and W. J. Irvin, 24 North Twenty-third street, owns a dog. The dog is especially fond of Mrs. Tizard's cat, but the feline is in the habit of pulling the attention of the canine. The two pets' arguments for weeks have furnished fun for the neighbors, but Saturday morning Mrs. Tizard had Irvin arrested for owning a vicious dog.

WOULD QUASH INDICTMENT

Counsel for Thomas H. Matters Seek Abatement of Charges.

JURY IS ALLEGED ILLEGAL

Plea on Legal Technicality Is Set Aside for Consideration by Judge Morris Until Week from Monday.

Thomas H. Matters' case was taken up before Federal Judge Paige Morris when ex-Senator Burkett and W. J. Conwell, representing Mr. Matters, offered a motion of abatement in an effort to quash the indictment.

Counsel for the defense asserted that the grand jury which brought the indictment was drawn illegally owing to the fact that the deputy clerk at Lincoln drew the jurors, when the law declares that the clerk himself must perform this act.

Judge Morris did not agree with the defense on this point insofar as sustaining their plea in entirety, but put the case over until a week from next Monday.

Matters' attorneys have been arguing ever since the case has been taken up that United States Attorney Howell did not have the books of the bank at Sutton and the papers relative to the case at their disposal for examination. Howell stated in court that everything relative to the case had been in his office for weeks, and on application Matters and his attorneys might peruse them at their leisure.

"Your honor, this is merely a subterfuge to continue this case, and I don't want to see this ball game called on account of rain when there is no rain," argued Howell. "I am willing this case comes to trial next Monday if the defense guarantees that it will make no effort to continue it."

"No, you bet we won't," inserted Matters. "You don't get me that way." Federal Judge Morris finally set the date for a week from Monday, and instructed Howell to write the receiver at the First National bank of Sutton to send every scrap of paper relative to the books and case, at once, to the United States attorney's office.

"Gentlemen," concluded Judge Morris, "this will give all a concerned a chance to straighten this book argument. I set this case for a week from Monday and you can count that there will be not many rain checks issued by this court at that time unless it's raining very hard."

Sentiment Wins in War Waged Against Court House Pigeons

Sentiment has won in the contest waged over the fate of the pigeons who inhabit the ledges and eaves of the court house, and they are to roost there unmolested. Superintendent Joseph Calabria, after a conference with humane officer Neilson, has issued orders that no more traps be set for the purpose of catching the birds, who are especially fond of the court house, and they are to roost there unmolested.

In One Minute Your Stuffy Nose and Head Clears, Sneezing and Now Running Cough, Dull Headache Goes.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm." Get a small bottle at once, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops sneezing discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately. Don't let any more of the winter colds, with head aches, nostrils closed, sneezing and blowing, Catarrh or clogged-up throat, and raw dryness in distressing but truly needless. Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.—Advertisement.

HOW TO USE A DOCTOR

CHAPTER III AN APPEAL TO THE INTELLIGENCE OF NEBRASKA.

"THE UNIT OF MEDICAL EDUCATION"—By HENRY S. MUNRO, M. D.

In my discussion last Sunday, reference was made to the Hospital, as the "Unit of Medical Education," which idea I stated was championed by Sir William Osler at the opening of the Henry Phipps Psychiatric Clinic at the Johns Hopkins University, about two years ago. This reference might have been misleading from one point of view, but Sir William Osler's position upon that occasion strongly sustains the motive which has prompted my professional work for the past sixteen years, both in reference to my lectures, as well as to my written publications, as the preface to the third edition of my published monograph clearly sets forth. In fact, I am in harmony with the entire coterie of scientific physicians, in all parts of the world, whose work has contributed to the present high status of scientific medicine, as the published record of my own contributions for the past seven years will incontrovertibly establish.

Before the opening of the Phipps Psychiatric Institute, in conjunction with the Johns Hopkins University, I had labored for fourteen years, calling the attention of the Medical Profession in the United States to a badly neglected field of practical clinical medicine, and, as before stated, my endeavors won the endorsement, encouragement, and commendation of the best known physicians of all sections of this country, and in the large part of the United States visited by me, and it was with no small degree of satisfaction that I learned of the opening of the Henry Phipps Psychiatric Institute, since this advanced step in the teaching of Clinical Medicine by an institution of the best known physicians of the highest possible endorsement for the sanity, usefulness and practicality of my labors for the fourteen years previous. This great institution has generously recognized the merits of my work, through the commendatory review of my monograph in the Bulletin of the Johns Hopkins University. In fact, a well-known Ex-President of the A. M. A., upon the occasion of my visit to Louisiana, ended his remarks, when introducing me to his class, by saying: "Gentlemen: Although a young man, Dr. Munro has the endorsement and commendation of the brains and intelligence of the Medical Profession of America, or at least, of a very large portion of this country, since I am personally acquainted with the physicians whose testimony he bears, and for this reason I am proud to have the pleasure of presenting him to occupy my hour upon this occasion."

My work was encouraged by many of the leading specialists, internists and surgeons of the City of Omaha, as their own signatures to letters in my possession attest, and upon my entrance into the Omaha Douglas County Society, a leading Omaha surgeon introduced me as a man who had won distinction in a certain branch of Clinical Medicine.

To return to Sir William Osler's address at the opening of the Phipps Psychiatric Clinic, under the auspices of the Unit of Medical Education, I am more than pleased to say that I enter into hearty accord with all that this noted physician said upon that occasion. He was then and there emphasizing the obligation that the Medical School owes to the larger social organization in extending its clinical and teaching facilities so as to properly equip the special classes going out into general and physical practice, so that they could treat the functional, physical and mental disorders in their incipency, and would thus be prepared to guard the welfare of such patients as the one to which reference is made in my article last week.

Two years ago, the Dean of the Medical Department of the University of Nebraska, a most capable and scientific physician, said to me: "I want you to join us in our School." He did not say anything else, because there was no room left for further discussion, after I made my reply. I frankly declined, saying that I could not affiliate with some of those constituting his faculty, and that I might move to a Western City at some time in the future, as an attractive offer had been made me by another School of Medicine.

But, even if I still clung to that decision, I feel that I owe a duty to my colleagues who are in the process of becoming, in the Medical Department of the Nebraska State University, as well as to the State of Nebraska, to point out the weakness and inefficiency in the Department of Clinical Psychiatry in this institution. I hold in my possession a Journal, two of them, containing articles from the Chair of Psychiatry and Neurology in this institution which clearly reveals its incompetency. Here is one of the many similar statements contained in his published writings: "It is strange to see that purely scientific work tends to obscure the power of the will and moral forces in man." (See Western Medical Review, Aug. 1908, page 32; also April, 1911, page 37.)

That statement, though absurd nonsense, condemns the scientific physicians in every other Department of the State University, as well as the men of science in all other departments in the entire state; I have in my possession further statements that clearly indicate his opposition to scientific medical education.

These remarks were made in direct antagonism to the branch of work to which the past fifteen years of my life has been devoted, correlated as it is with Psychology and Neurology, and based entirely upon scientific monism—that physiological basis which unifies the physical and mental, making them one and the same thing, i. e., an organism in function, depending upon its reaction to environmental stimuli, and recognizing no such thing as a non-material entity, whether designated as mental or physical. This attack came forth, among others, in the following words: "By making will the medicine in non-material treatment we liberate from mind a mysterious element—named psychotherapy—that has ever been resistant to rational medicine." The primary cause of mind is will. The secondary and last cause is its action on brain cells. In making mind, the will has no creative power as regards the cells in the brain, but must work with the grey matter nature has supplied and from it produce mind.

"The will acting on and through the brain produces mind, uncolored, or cultured, physiologic or pathologic, limited only by the structural imperfections of the brain, and the duration of life, for the power of the will is limitless."

Such teaching is not in accord with modern science. It is metaphysical nonsense pure and simple. Before I would violate my own self respect, and the trust reposed in me by my colleagues in all parts of this country, I would prefer being classed "unethical."

In the Oct. 30th issue of Science, Prof. S. J. Metzler, of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, discussing medical education, makes the following timely remarks: "We have seen that the great evils of the present system consist in the fact that, for our present heads of clinical departments instruction is only a secondary occupation and that on account of the extensive work which their primary occupation demands, they are unable to follow efficiently the continuous progress of medicine. (Continues he) I have no doubt that the ten clinicians who make up the strong committee are great authorities in their special fields, both in the eyes of the profession and the public; that is they are great practitioners and consultants. But for this very reason they are just the men who are not fit to be heads of departments in medicine. Will the members of this committee and the members of the Council on Education be unbiased enough to recognize the fact that being a celebrated consultant and being an efficient teacher of modern medicine are separate capacities which frequently exclude one another. The frequent repetition in the report of the council of the requirement that men be chosen must be great authorities in the eyes of the public and the profession is to say the least, disconcerting. To be a great authority in the eyes of the public is surely no evidence even of being an efficient consultant. Any one who is frequently mentioned in newspapers as having been in consultation to treat this or that rich or noted man, or who has charged enormous fees, etc., stands as a great authority in the public eye, and I am afraid not infrequently also, in the eyes of the profession, in the present state of medical education."

Further referring to the fitness of the head of a department in a Medical School, Prof. Metzler says: "He should help to make medicine a science and its teaching a serious business, and by his behavior he should assist in the efforts to deprive the practice of medicine of its commercial aspects."

"The election to headship must be based upon evidence that for the past years the appointee has been continuously a close student of modern medicine and showed efficiency in teaching, as well as in research, in the scientific and practical fields of medicine."

The reader may ask what this has to do with "How to Use a Doctor?" I am simply justifying myself for the publicity that I am receiving in these articles, since I am forced to show my reason for being unwilling to stand behind incompetent men, whether occupying a Professorship in a State University or not. If the Medical Department of a State University, the clinical branches, is to be used as an advertisement for a group of Physicians, supported by the State, and run in competition against the larger professional and social organization, while the real cause of disease is being neglected, I prefer to protect myself by open antagonism to such an injustice in the name of "Medical Education," a fraud and a farce beyond words to express, because unjust and inefficient.

Thousands of dissatisfied American Physicians lack the scholarship to protect themselves from the injustice done to the larger professional and social organization brought about by the inadequate system of medical education in vogue at the present time. Their own work is by far more competent and efficient than that of many of the medical educators at the present time. Let the Medical Schools fall into line with Yale, the Washington and Johns Hopkins Universities, with full time clinical teachers, who are not making an advertising machine of a "State University," and then they may be entitled to use the term "ethical." If the competitive system must prevail, I will be forced to use the equipment at my command. I will turn on the light, from the point of view of my rich personal experience.

Diseases are experiments made by nature which great clinicians ought to try to interpret not merely by pressing them into facts, views or classifications found or put up by others, but also by original, broad views and illuminating conceptions of their own. The scientific and scientifically well-trained man whom they ought to be. Knowledge is only of value in so far as it is useful. Of what use is a collection of data, called science, or accumulations of a large collection of observations on various natural phenomena, until by the application of persistent thought it is used to produce definite and tangible therapeutic results, or is made to become subservient to some useful end or purpose. Efficiency is the watchword of the age, but it implies not only a wide knowledge of facts, but a breadth of vision that will enable the relation among the various categories of human knowledge to be seen clearly and applied to the practical needs of mankind.

Such is the function of scientific Psychotherapy, or of "Modern Psychiatry and Neurology," and it is far more efficacious than merely the prescribing of drugs or the employment of the knife, however important their use may be where special cases demand them, and this more advanced therapeutic equipment should be in the armamentarium of every physician turned out from our medical schools.

At the reading of the first paper presented by me to the Nebraska State Medical Association at Lincoln, about four and a half years ago, it was unanimously voted that a request that Psychotherapy be taught in the Medical Department of the Nebraska State University be submitted to the Regents, there being not a single dissenting vote. After that the voice of Democracy was hushed. The Oligarchy of a St. Simons, the former advertising quack of Nebraska, appeared upon the scene. A censorship opposed to Science was established. The freedom of individuality was quelled, and Democracy has been heard no more. Since then, I have reached the Nebraska Physicians through Medical Journal articles, published in other states, in defiance of the local machine, save in my discussion of the papers presented by others. Next Sunday, I will tell you how to use a Doctor, and of what he has to offer in the interest of health, happiness and efficiency (maybe). 506-S Brandeis Theater Bldg., Omaha, Neb.
