

HAMMOND SEEKS RELEASE

Former Internal Revenue Collector Asks Relief from Bond.

IS STILL HELD RESPONSIBLE

Even Though He Quit the Job Last June He is Still Obligated to Answer for Financial Affairs of the Office.

Ross Hammond desires to free himself from the responsibilities of the internal revenue collectorship of Nebraska, since he no longer holds the job or draws the salary. He told Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock yesterday in an interview he came all the way from Fremont to hold with the senator.

Mr. Hammond resigned his position as collector of internal revenue June 21, when he decided to enter the state primary for the republican nomination for governor. His chief deputy, Ed North, was at once made acting collector. That did not relieve Hammond of his bond, however. He is bonded to the government in the sum of $100,000, and is responsible to the government for the proper conduct of all the affairs of the office.

Case is Ridiculous.

"It is ridiculous," said Hammond. "Here I am responsible for the office and am not connected with it. I have severed my connection with the office in name and in salary. The only connection I now have is that I am still under a bond of $100,000, and if anything should go wrong I am the goat. Now I don't anticipate any trouble, of course, but in case anything should happen you can see where I am. I certainly want this matter of the appointment of a successor settled as soon as possible so that I may get this load off my mind. I would not even have cared so much had it not been for the appointment of a set of new men to aid in the collection of the special war tax. Here are four new men appointed recently for this purpose, and I never saw them. They are men that I have had nothing to do with, men about whom I know nothing. Doubtless they are all right, but as a straight business proposition it is ridiculous that I should be under bond for the proper conduct of men in responsible positions when I had nothing to do with the selection of those men and when I in fact never saw them."

Hitchcock Surprised.

Senator Hitchcock expressed surprise at this interview. "That is news to me," said the senator. He did not know that Hammond was still under bond. He knew, of course, that he had resigned his position last June to become a candidate for governor, but he supposed that ended his connection with the federal position as collector of revenue in Nebraska. He promised to see what he could do about it as soon as he gets back to Washington.

"The only thing to do," said Hammond, "is for those democrats to get together and agree on an appointment and quit playing horse."

No Money to Indians Who Buy Booze With It, Orders Cato Sells

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Gross violations of the laws against selling liquor to Indians or taking liquor onto an Indian reservation caused Cato Sells, commissioner of Indian affairs today to resort to drastic measures to stop what he believes has become a practice on the Osage reservation in Oklahoma. Commissioner Sells has invoked the law which empowers him to suspend payments to the Indians when he is convinced intoxicating liquors are within convenient reach of them, and has directed the superintendent of the Osage reservation to suspend the December payment of several hundred thousand dollars. "Unless he is satisfactorily assured by the chiefs and headmen of the tribe and the county and town officers, and also the leading citizens of Powhuska, that the law against selling liquor to Indians or introducing it into Indian country is strictly enforced."

Bowes Calls In the Reserves When He Tears His Pants

Why H. H. Bowes, the attorney, wore an overcoat during an entire morning in county court, although the room was comfortably warm, is a sad story which is exciting the sympathy of his friends. Torn trousers, damaged when he got out of an automobile, figure largely in the story. Had Mr. Bowes not kept on his overcoat he would have been in the position of the warring armies, which dare not retreat. The tear was a large one. Continuing the military figure, Mr. Bowes kept a censorship on his reasons for wearing the overcoat equalled only by modern military leaders. He was, however, compelled to call by telephone his aid, Mrs. Bowes, in order to ask that reserves, consisting of another pair of trousers, be sent up. His story was overheard by county court employees.

SIoux CITY PROTESTS ON SOME RATES FROM OMAHA

Most of the freight traffic men of the Burlington and Northwestern are in Sioux City, giving testimony before an Interstate Commerce commission examiner, who is hearing the case wherein the Sioux City Commercial club is protesting the rate made on freight from Omaha to Nebraska points. The Nebraska State

Railway commission several months ago reduced the Nebraska rates from Omaha to stations on the railroad lines into the state. Distances considered, these rates are 15 to 20 per cent lower than from Sioux City to the same points. Sioux City took the matter before the Interstate Commerce commission, alleging that the action of the Nebraska commission is discriminatory. On the other hand, the Nebraska commission took the position that they were not, as the body had nothing to do with rates from points outside the state. The Want Ad Columns of The Bee Are Read Daily by People in Search of Advertised Opportunities.
