LOVE WHOLE EARTH IS BISHOP'S PRAYER

William A. Quayle Utters This Thought in Appeal Before Methodist Convention.

PLEADS FOR WORLD SYMPATHY

Seven Benevolent Boards of Church Are Subject of Address Given by Noted Divine at First Church.

Bishop William A. Quayle of Minneapolis, told a big congregation at the First Methodist church Thursday, that Americans are "too selfish of foreigners, negroes and immigrants of alien race."

Running his fingers through his long, reddish-gray hair, the bishop recalled times when he wished he "was not religious, but just red-headed, because a red-headed man can do a week's work in three minutes."

These were times when someone of "acrawny soul" went sniffing around because he thought he was better than some man of another race or color.

"O, God, make us big enough to love the whole earth," the bishop cried in his prayer.

With quick wit, turning sharply into religious pathos, Bishop Quayle kept the audience alternately in smiles and tears, with now and then a great burst of hearty laughter.

Christ Died for All.

In part the bishop said:

"Christ didn't come here to die for America, Madagascar, Hindustan, but for the whole world."

"When I was studying 'Joggerphy' I learned that the earth was made up of several countries, and with great labor I memorized the hara names and learned to spell them, but there was a better way. I recommend that young students of geography learn simply that there is just a world."

"O, how easy it is to be little."

Speaking of the war:

"If we take the lesson of this great war to heart perhaps it may seem worth while; it will show the wonderful solidarity of the financial systems of the world."

"Still, we must learn that there is a solidarity of the races. Your sympathies must be world-wide."

"We don't have to know a man's language. It is not necessary that he speak ours. We must simply take it to heart that we are all human beings, made in the image of God."

Kickers were ridiculed by the bishop, and the west was criticized for being always "too ready to leave the rest of the world alone. The deader a man is the more he kicks, like a decapitated chicken," he said.

Appeals for Church Boards.

Bishop Quayle was speaking at the Methodist Episcopal church convention "for the consideration of the achievements and opportunities of the church through the seven benevolent boards," which is being held under the auspices of the general conference commission on financial and the laymen's missionary movement.

The bishop left for home last night, although he was to address the University club today. He carried his arm in a splint and no explanation of the injury could be secured.

Secretary A. K. Kynett of the Board of Home Missions, Philadelphia, preceded Bishop Quayle. He called attention to the fact that in three years the board has paid a $50,000 debt.

"This, our land, is God's chosen land, where the ultimate battles of Christianity and of civilization will be fought out," said Secretary Kynett. Continuing, he declared:

"Once I thought the flood of aliens coming to the country was our menace. Now I know it is the opportunity of the church."

Dr. Henry J. Copier, convention secretary, presided at the evening meeting. Bishop William O. Shepard of Kansas City introduced Bishop Quayle.

The Omaha, Council Bluffs and Tecumseh districts are patronizing the convention.

Edvige Elvira Vaccari Soprano

Edvige Elvira Vaccari, some name that! And the pretty woman who is behind it has some rank in the musical world. She's one of the big artists of the San Carlo Grand Opera company, Vaccari to be heard in this city.

Mrs. Vaccari is the daughter of an Italian marquis. Her father has a castle—some of those queer old forts of the middle ages, perched up on a hill near the city of Turin. Vaccari always liked to sing, even when she was a mighty little girl. When a child she used to listen to the peasants sing as they worked in her father's fields, and she would sing with them.

When little Vaccari was 12 years old her folks took her to Rome on a visit and one great day she was presented to the queen. She sang a few little songs in the queen's private apartments, and her majesty told the girl's mother that she ought to train that voice.

After that Vaccari was taken to Paris and drilled, and drilled, and drilled. Although of the nobility her family was not wealthy, and it was hard for them to afford their daughter everything that was needed to help her in her fight for the perfect singing voice. But they got through it somehow, and today, which is only a few short years away from that interesting educational period, she ranks as one of the best in grand opera.

Watch for Vaccari. You'll like her voice, and she is said to be a wonderfully clever actress, too. The American opera critics have termed her "the second Toscazzini," and reports of her wonderful singing seem to fully warrant the comparison.

She will sing Gilda in "Rigoletto" at the Auditorium.

The $5,000 estate of the late Mrs. Bridget Gahagan is involved in a contest among the heirs in both Douglas and Holt counties and will result in court proceedings in both Omaha and O'Neill. Mrs. Gahagan had been declared incompetent at O'Neill.

McMillen East to Buy Heavier Aeroplane

Ralph E. McMillen, one of the aviators contracted to the automobile speedway, has departed for the east bent on buying a cross-country aeroplane. The machine now owned by McMillen is built only for exhibition flights, and the little aviator is determined to make long distance flights over the entire middle west next summer. Thus he will buy a heavy machine which can stand all the knocks of touring.

GERMANS HAVE LIEGE FORTS ABOUT REBUILT FOR OWN OCCUPATION

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 25.—(No better illustration can be given of the far-sightedness and thoroughness of the German military machine than the elaborate rebuilding operations in course of completion at Liege. In the comparatively short time since its forts were wrecked by the invaders' artillery, Liege has been rebuilt into a model German fortress and is to be used as an object lesson for students in the German military schools. It is built as though the Germans expect to stay. All the Belgian forts have been repaired with a single exception; much of the old artillery has been replaced with Krupp fortress cannon of the latest type and even the landscape has been remodeled with a view of defense. All the newest ideas of German and Austrian military experts have been embodied in the placing of ordnance, in the erection of ramparts, in trenches, observation places, highway mines, secondary batteries and block-houses.

There is an intricate system of connecting works between the various main points of the outlying defenses. Great attention has been paid to the use of villages and forests for concealing fortifications. The trenches are flat with the ground so as to be visible only from above and are protected with concealed barb wire entanglements. The trenches are drained and partially covered for protection against rain and snow, while the width is ample enough to allow carriage of stores and ammunition without interfering with the troops.

A considerable part of the hard labor involved in completing the trenches is done with a "military traction trench digger," which cuts a furrow about three feet deep.

Most of the old Belgian forts have been

SHRAPNEL WOUNDS SERIOUS

Balls Carry Fragments of Clothing and Germs Into Body.

BOMB FRAGMENTS PENETRATE

Simple Wounds from Rifle Bullets Heal Most Rapidly of All, Says Surgeon General of the Saxon Army.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—The German surgeons have begun to talk about their experience in healing the wounded in this war. Prof. Payr of Leipzig university, who is acting as surgeon-general to the Saxon army, recently delivered an address at one of the improvised hospitals on the line of the German communications, in which he gave much interesting information on this subject.

Payr pointed out that the balls used in shrapnel shells produce much more dangerous wounds than rifle bullets. They carry into the body fragments of clothing, a corresponding quantity of dangerous germs; and they are much more likely to be lodged in the body. There was suppuration in 70 to 75 per cent of cases. The same danger is still more serious with wounds from fragments of shells. It was found, too, that this war has been especially marked by the great number of such wounds. Not only do shell-fragments carry germs into the body with bits of clothing, but the dangerous gases from shrapnel explosion often adhere to the fragments and balls in sufficient quantities to poison the wound. Lock-jaw is often produced by wounds of this character, but by vaccinating patients with a tetanus serum the German surgeons have materially reduced the ratio of deaths in such cases since the first weeks of the war.

Especially dangerous are the wounds caused by fragments of bombs thrown by aviators. Even very small fragments often produce much more dangerous wounds than much larger pieces of ordinary shells. These small fragments penetrate very deep into the body, cutting through all blood vessels, and thick masses of muscle are cut through as with a sharp knife. Aeroplane bombs also frequently cause bad burns.

Rifle Wounds Heal Quickly.

So far as simple flesh wounds from small caliber rifles are concerned, Payr found that these heal very rapidly. In most cases the wounded were able to return to the ranks within a week or two. Even in cases of chest wounds, where the ribs are not touched, healing is usually very rapid, even though the lungs be penetrated.

A new kind of wound has been caused by the sharp steel armor thrown at great heights by French aeroplanes. These arrows have about the thickness of an ordinary lead pencil, and when thrown from a height of about 5,000 feet strike their victim at the velocity of a bullet just leaving the muzzle of a rifle. Payr says they produce very dangerous wounds.

Dr. Payr declares that the small bullet badly shatters the hollow bones of the arm and leg when striking them at short distances, but that at greater distances they tend more to bore a smooth hole, with little or no fracturing. Bones near the joints are shot through smoothly, and the wounds heal with no difficulty. Another effect of the present type of bullet is to cut through the blood vessels, whereas they would often be pushed aside by the older lead bullet and escape disruption. This is regarded by Payr as one dangerous result of the caliber bullet, especially where veins and arteries are cut through deep in the flesh.

Wounds in the abdomen, says Payr, are most likely to heal without an operation than with one, and this, he says, was first proved in the Boer war. The difficulty in the way of an operation is that it is almost impossible to take the necessary antiseptic precautions.

Mrs. Charles Peterson, 54 South Thirtieth street, is in a critical condition in a local hospital as a result of blows given Wednesday night, it is charged, by her husband, Charles Peterson, a taxi chauffeur.

Peterson was arrested at 8 o'clock last night and held in the city jail on a charge of assault. His wife's head is said to have been crushed and she is suffering from a blow over the heart. She was kept in bed at her home until last night, when her condition became so serious that she was removed to a hospital, where she is not expected to live.
