The Bee Publishing Company, Proprietor. BEE BUILDING, FARNAM AND SEVENTEENTH. stered at Omaha postoffice as second-class matter.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION. By mail per year and Sunday 666 without Sunday 666 and Runday 1666 and R

REMITTANCE.

the draft, express or postal order. Only twotestamps received in payment of small acnts Personal checks, except on Omaha and eastern hange, not accepted.

aha—The Bee Bullding.
Ath Omaha—Sis N street.
Annul Binfrs—14 North Main street.
Acoln—E Little Building.
Acons—Sis New Building.
Acons—Sis New Bank of Commerce.
A Louis—Sis New Bank of Commerce.
A Sis New Bank of Commerce.
A Sis New Bank of Commerce.
A Sis New Bank of Commerce.

defrees communications relating to news and odi-orial matter to Omaha Bec, Editorial Department JANUARY CIRCULATION.

53,714

of Nebraska. County of Douglas, ss. vight Williams, circulation manager of The Bosing company, being duly sworn, says that the circulation for the month of January, 1915, DWIGHT WILLIAMS, Circulation Manager, abscribed in my presence and sworn to before this 24 day of February, 1915. ROBERT HUNTER, Notary Public.

Subscribers leaving the city temporarily should have The Bee mailed to them. Ad-dress will be changed as often as requested.

Thought for the Day Selected by Jo. F. Barton

Simplicity, truth and unaffectedness are the leading principles of the beautiful in every work of art.—Gluck.

Perhaps the objections to the Carnegie and Rockefeller funds could be removed by letting the objectors revise the mailing list.

Itsmized appropriations for state institution might relieve the managers of so much headwork that they would be ashamed to draw their

Those Swiss troops guarding the nautrality some are not doing any fighting, but they supply mighty good food for the camera artist just the same.

Deficits may come and shipping bills go, but free seeds go on regardless. The implous pens of critics cannot swerve congressmen from the Mount Vernon timber is slways appropriate for a souvenir gavel, but Hermitage lickory is the timber for business in a democratic body directed by "Old Hickory's" namesake.

The Mexican capital question differs from the county seat fights on this side of the Rio when it refers to them as the "pay-if-you-win" Grande. In Mexico every leader has his own capital until be is killed off or exiled.

"Be your own lobbyist," excisims Mr. Bryan to railroad managers. Suppose they accept the advice, what will the underlings do for a living? Is Mr. Bryan forsaking the "common people?"

Senator Williams' estimate of what the fillibuster speeches cost the country is interesting if true. But he left out of the calculation a saying of $20,000,000 by blowing the shipping bill on the rocks.

The legislative limousine of today does not differ except in capacity from the legislative gocart of primitive times. A bill which even winks at a prospective job glides along the road with the risk of a puncture.

Mr. Bryan again scorns the brewery vote, Nineteen years ago he was even fleroor in scorp. ing the goldbug vote. But he did not scorn the gold which the goldbugs slipped into his cam-

The governor of Georgis condemns lynching as a crime against civilisation and offers a reward for the apprehension of the perpetrators of a recent crime. The money will not be od. Officials may fume against lynch law until black in the race, but perpetrators go undstacted and unhung.

A New York idea buttressed by a court judgment taxing the cost of putting out a fire on the egligent property owner, is being whipped into law in the Massachusetts legislature. Making a negligent property owner, in event of fire, split the insurance money with the fire department is well calculated to cut down the dividends of fire buggery.

Smahn awoke this morning, rubbed its eyes, and ad itself open more in the grasp of the jee king, thermometer went down to 2 above zero with a

The thermometer went down to 2 above zero with a sami-hurricane wind blowing.

The Musical union orchestra Sabbath concert at Boyd's was much enjoyed. The leader, H. T. Ervine, congributed a cornel salo.

John Oriffin, and is years, died at the home of his sister, hirs. Moran, near Mason.

Mr. Harry Crumer, employed in the Nebruska department of the world's fair at New Orleans, has settlemen to Omaha.

The serm of United States Marshal Blackerson has

The term of United States Marshal Bierbower has spired, but he holds over until a successor is ap-unted and qualified. A meeting of the Nebruska Woman's Indian asso-intion is to be held at the residuace of hire. J. M. Wootworth on a call issued by Mrs. H. M. James as

The articles of incorporation of the newly organ-ised charity union is published, duly authenticated and countries to by G. M. Hitchcock, notary public. The fair given by the Ladies' Bensyclant society sessed last night. The receipts approximated nearly 17,70, of which $1.50 will be not. Among the lucky inners at the final raffle were, crear quit, W. H. cary; seal, bee and muff, Thomas F. Boyd; gold atch, Or. Harfield; washing machine, M. Heliman; inque. A. Papperhurg; baby cloak, J. Oberfelder; conhelder, George Scienced.

The Railroads, the People and the Newspapers

Talking at Indianapolls, Secretary Bryan acvises the railroads, instead of sending lobbyists. to send their presidents and high officials to speak for them at state legislatures and in congress. If Mr. Bryan were consistent he would advise them likewise, or preferably, to speak for themselves directly to the people, as well as to the people's representatives in legislatures and in congress. And to do this only two ways are open to the railroads, being the same two ways by which Mr. Bryan speaks to the people, either through the press or in public addresses seeped through the press.

But when the railroads take space in the newspapers, as they have recently done in Nebraska, to lay their case directly before the people, Mr. Bryan accuses them of trying to corrupt public opinion. Referring to the railroads' newspaper publicity campaign, Mr. Bryan's Commoner last month declared that "thousands of dollars are being spent in an effort to convince the newspaper owners, or the people, that general business prosperity is impossible without permitting a higher rate for railroad service." In other words, Mr. Bryan advises the railroads to take the people into their confidence, and when they follow his advice, or rather anticipate it, he intimates that they are trying insidiously to control the wellsprings of public opinion.

Now, we agree with Mr. Bryan that the only thing for the railroads to do is to have all their dealings with the public, or with representatives of the public, open and above board, and that the day of the underground secret lobby is past. But Mr. Bryan knows as well as anyone that a railroad in buying newspaper space to define its attitude and present its arguments to the public no more convinces the newspaper owners to take their side of the questions at issue than does the department stores, the meat markets or the book publishers who buy space to exploit their wares, except as the newspaper owner is also a newspaper reader and a firm believer in newspaper publicity. The railroads should deal fairly with the people, and the people should give the railroads a square deal, and as their practical medium of communication, the newspaper is also entitled to a square deal.

The Naval Program.

Thirty millions or so is set aside by the house for the construction of new dreadnaughts and other forms of fighting ships, thus continuing the expansion of the United States navy at the rate that has been maintained for several years. It insures the continuance of the service at a high point of efficiency, and certainly is liberal enough, at a time when the ordinary revenue of the government, augmented by several forms of special taxation, is insufficient to meet expenses. The passage of the bill through the house was not unattended by statements that have become very familiar to the public of late, but the hope is indulged that the amount will be sufficient to calm the perturbed souls of the makers of guns and gunpowder and the like, and that for a time we will hear less of the unprepared condition of the United States to participate in a world war.

The "Pay-if-You-Win" System.

Whether its original coinage or not, the Lincoln Journal gives us an apt phrase descriptive of the operations of the contingent fee lawyers system. Bills are pending in the legislature designed to stop the contingent fee abuse, one measure prohibiting such contracts altogether, and another limiting the lawyer's divvy to 10 per cent. These proposals naturally draw forth protest from the legal profession, not only as objectionable interference with their price schedules, but also as barring the undentable good which the contingent fee sometimes serves for poor clients.

The Bee does not have to re-state its position on this question, because it has repeatedly shown up the glaring defects of the "pay-if-youwin" system. We are firmly convinced that the lawyer's partnership with his client for a halfand-half split is responsible for more perjury, more framed-up testimony, more jury fixing. more blackmail and shakedown-in fact, more crooked law practice, than any any other one thing. Most reputable lawyers admit that much of the odium brought down upon their profession of late years is the direct result of the work of shysters and ambulance chasers resorting to desperate and despicable means to cash in on contingent fee cases, and of the unwillingness of the bar to shake off these parasites and institute reforms on the inside. We also recognize, however, the occasional possibility of injustice, or denial of justice, through inability to engage a lawyer on a contingent fee basis. These cases, however, are not so frequent as lawyers would have us believe, and where legitimate reason exists for a contingent fee contract, there is no reason whatever for keeping it secret. We belleve, therefore, that the contingent fee evil could be suppressed if no such contracts were enforceable unless first filed in court and approved by the presiding judge with full power to revise downward the stipulated percentage if it appears excessive.

If we do not soon get some reform of this kind, we may have to take up another alternstive which the Journal suggests and which is to provide miaried attorneys at public expense for civil cases, as we now do in criminal cases, wherever the individual is unable to engage competent legal services for himself.

Remedy for Gambling in Grain.

From the grain brokers themselves comes a suggestion that may mean the ultimate solution of the problem of how to control the evil of gambling in foodstuffs, and especially in grain, It is simplicity itself, and merely involves "raining the ante" on the gamblers. At present it is resorted to by the brokers to protect themselves against possible loss from the operations of irresponsible "traders" on the excited and wildly fluctuating market. Its effect so far has been to reduce speculation by eliminating the little fellows, and thus steadying the trading.

If speculative operations on the market can be controlled by the brokers through means so simple and so readily applied, why can not a law be deviced that will require all board of trade operations to be kept on a plane that will at least minimize the evil of speculation, and serve to keep the price of foodstuffs somewhere near the level established by the law of supply and demand? The bigt the brokers have furnished ought to be carefully looked after by goine man lawmaking tody.

Press Poll on Prohibiting the Exportation of Arms

In Two Parts-Part L. To get some idea of how the press of the United States ranges itself in this matter, we submitted to a thousand representative papers of all sections the folowing question: "Do you favor stopping by law the exportation of war materials to belligerenta?" Of 40 replies, 24 answer "No," 107 "Tes," and twenty-nine are noncommittal. Considering in a spedal group the replies from cities of ever 50,000 habitants, we find the "Noes" even more in the majority, the vote standing 85 to 94. When we to the cities and towns of smaller population, we find opinion much more evenly divided, 164 replies opposing embargo legislation and 160 approving it.

Interesting and illuminating comment in many instances supplemented the answers of the editors to our question. Thus the Chicago Tribune, seeing in the exportation or arms "a matter of international rather than internal politics," offers this striking sug-"The allies' treatment of American shipping is not what it would be if, for instance, Mr. Blaine were in the State department. The United States government can and should use the question of exporting arms to secure concessions to American shippers and exporters."

Some papers, considering the problem simply from commercial viewpoint, say in affect: "Be," the beligerents whatever they will pay for; our business has suffered enough already because of the war, so let's take what compensation we can get." Others, again, like the Toledo Blade, would permit the exportation of "food, clothing, and other supplies not directly used in man-killing," but would prohibit the sale of "arms and ammunition;" and the Oakland Enquirer thinks we should export war materials "unless needed at home." To the Spokane Chronicle, however, enactment of an embargo law on war materials "would appear to be the logical course for a nation that desires peace and neutrality." in the ranks of those who favor embargo are the Tacoma News, Los Angeles Times, Denver Express, Wichita Beacon, Kansas City Post, Memphis News-Scimitar, Illinois State Journal, Grand Rapids News, Saginaw Valley News, Dayton News, Norfolk Ledger Dispatch, Paterson Call and Evening News, and the

In Nebrasko, with its large German-American population, where the state senate has adopted a caplution favoring an arms embargo, the Omaha World-Herald (whose chief owner is the United States senator sponsering the bill) violently accuses the United States of being "practially the only highly civilized neutral nation that is reaping a blood-money profit from the sale of arms and ammunition to the countries that are at war!" It insists it is all a mistake to defend our policy on the ground that it is sound commercially, for "the building up of great factories for the manufacture of arms and ammuniion means that we will have them on our hands when the war is over-means that we will have a Kruppism of our own," while "the sale of their product to destroy the property and take the lives of peoples with whom we are at peace must inevitably cause entments that will injuriously affect our trade and commerce long after the war is ended." In another German-American region a writer in the Milwaukee Free Press says that "no bloodless code of rules of law" can change the fact that we are "contributing to the destruction of the life of the German people and of Austrian and German culture." And he goes to say that, unless this country rise now "to the full stature of its sovereign responsibilities' by asserting its right to place an embargo on the shipment of arms, it will "in the future face the same situation that now confronts those countries swept from the commerce of the seas by the superior naval power of Great Britain." Among journals printed in German we find Germania, a Milwaukee weekly, which proresess to express "the attitude of Americans of German descent," arguing that "if the American press had not been deceived" by cable reports inspired by the British government, "the American people would not have indulged in such deplorable partisanship," and it urges our return to "izue neutrality" by refusing "to supply any of the warring nations with weapon

The embargo measure is designed to "make American neutrality less one-sided and less serviceable to, England" is an observation of the Cleveland Wachter und Anseiger, and in like veln the Buffalo freund exhorts all German-Americans to protest to the administration that it has strayed from the right road in its neutrality. According to the Bostoner Anxelger. "further tolerance of the present conditions will m no way add to the respect by other nations of our free and neutral country, as we are proclaiming it to be." and this journal adds that the time is come to stop by enactment of a law "the exportation of war material of whatever nature." In the view of the California Demokrat the United States is "guilty of a national hypocrisy" because it "prays for peace on Sunday and during the week is making a profit from the sale of weapons whereby this frightful slaughter may be prolonged." In this connection may be notes the remark of the Columbus Express and Westbote that our boasted business morality is "in the eyes of all respectable reopie a morality which comes very near being a crime against civilizaton."

In pointed contrast to the foregoing German-Amercan views is that of the St. Louis Arbeitsr Zeitung (Socialist), which believes that only a "hypocritical neutrality' sceks to prohibit the export of arms and holds that if it is proper to make and sell machines for the destruction of human beings in times of peace, then it should be equally proper to make and

(Conclusion Tomorrow.)

Twice Told Tales

Summer Correspondence.

This little story was told by Congressman William H. Murray of Oklahoma the other avening, when the conversation turned to the letters the old man writes to absent wifey in the good old summer time.

Recently two women were busily knitting scarts and things for the soldiers, when one of them casually referred to a summer yielt she had made in the

"That makes me think," was the smiling response the other. "What kind of setters does your husband write you when you are away on your summer trips?

"He niways writes very affectionately," answered the first, pausing to see if she had dropped any ctitches. "He invariably begins with 'My precious treasure," and ends by sending me his love."

"Very beautiful," was the smiling comment of the 'I suppose you answer in the same loving

"With a slight variation." reflectively replied the first. "I start my letter with "My precious treasur," and end by asking him to send me $10."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Felt Like One of Thom.

"Tuther day," related old Dad Bing, the Oklahoma cattle baron, who is temporarily in our midst, "I was rumbling along in a street car when a batch of young fellers got aboard. I judged they were college stu-dents, by their fuzzy miothes and queer-shaped heads. The ear was pretty full and they pushed and snorted back and forth in the siste, tramping on people's feet and committing similar frivolities that-a-way. Bime-bye they all r'ared back and fetched loose a long yell. Then the nearest one to me took a look, and not admiring my face or something, says:
"Well, my rural friend, don't you like it?"

'Shore, I fike it,' says I. 'I'm half-witted myself."-Kansas City Star.

Beclyrocity.

Wise New York vaudeville managers pay huge salaries for the use of names that draw the crowd, regardless of the histrionic ability, or lack of it, of the actors; and it is only natural that ball players of the actors; and it is only natural that ball players of meteoric fame should prove turing bait of this kind. Some of them fancy their own acting; some do not. Recembly two young pitchers whose work on the diamond has thrilled thousands of fans met after theater hours in the lebby of the Hotel Aster.

"Hello, Dick," said one. A pause. Then: "I saw your act."

"I saw yours Bill," countered the other. "Shake," grinned the first; and they did .- Every-body's Magazine.

University Expenses Are Public. LINCOLN, Feb. 6.-To the Editor of The Bee: I wish to write stating that appreciate the tone and spirit of the editorial in The Bee entitled, "Publicity for School Appropriations,"

I am sending you under other cover a copy of the biennial report of the regents showing the expenditures for the last two years. Office of Chancellor

The Cigar Salesman.

OMAHA, Feb. 7.-To the Editor of The Bee: Before the Omana Ad club re-cently, H. R. Whitehouse, local manager for the National Cash Register company, spoke upon efficient salesmanship and incidentally saw fit to characterize cigar cierks and seleemen as "the laniest mortals on earth" and the living embodiment of inefficiency.

Mr. Whitehouse is a smart man and he is an efficient salesman. He must be a smart man to hold his exalted position and get away with such talk, and he must be an efficient salesman or ne could not discourse upon the efficient salesman and diagnose business lile But he lacks discretion. He does not confine his utterances to accusing "few salesmen" or "some clerks," uses the sweeping assertion that cigar salesmen in general are not worthy of their hire.

It is hard to discern just how Mr. Whitehouse figures "on his famous blackboard." He is taking a slap at the cigar and tobacco industry when he says the smoking of expensive cigars breeds inefficiency, yet his firm caters to the retail cigar trade with a product which their efficient salesmen lead us to realize is indispensable. The assertion that cigar clerks continually smoke expensive cigars is just as absurd as to say the bank clerk is wealthy because he works in a bank. He indirectly accuses the cigar store proprietor of harboring incompetent help, not even having common sense enough to know it until Mr. Whitehouse shed his enlightenment.

That he is wrong requires no answer. A business that has progressed like the retail cigar trade, a business that has as much competition as the retail cigar business and a business that caters to the best citizens, the highest class of men, could never thrive with "lasy mortals" as salesmen. A set of salesmen that put in the hours that the cigar man works and has half as much efficiency for selling their merchandise will be hard for Mr. Whitehouse to find.

The writer hardly believes Mr. Whitehouse is in carnest. More than likely be was called upon to say something and while suffering with a severe case of exaggerated ego he knocked the first class of salesmen that came to his mind. Or, perhaps, he may have gotten his data and statistics from some ante-diluvian records that were ripe for quoting about the time he was of age.

It is the opinion of every cigar man in Omaha that an explanation should forthcoming. It is upon request of every honorable clerk in the city that the writer has submitted this protest and if not from a moral standpoint Mr. Whitehouse owes an apology from a business standpoint. L. E. HIGGINS.

Poultry Raising and Advertising. OMAHA, Feb. 8 .- To the Editor of The Bee: Since I have been a poultry breeder for a number of years in Nebraska, Mr. ing a pessimistic view of the poultry industry, caught my attention.

I have attended practically all the im portant, poultry shows in Nebraska for years, have talked with hundreds of Nebrasks and Iowa poultry men, have had indence with even more, and in practically all cases I have found these men enthusiastic and making money. I'll admit it requires brains and lots of work to make poultry pay, but it is paying big whenever these two essentials are com-

I can put my finger on dozens of poultrymen within five miles of the Omaha postoffice who have raised poultry for years and are making a snug sum from that the annual poultry crop would build two Pansma canals, we get some idea of the immensity of the industry. Of course, 90 per cent of this 2000,000,000 crop ced on farms where the bulk of is produced on larms where the bulk of the feed is raised at home. I also feel that this gentleman takes a wrong view of advertising rates in The Twentieth Century Farmer. Upon in-vestigation I find that in proportion to their circulation the rates are lower than practically all other high grade farm papers. The standard basis of figuring advertising rates in farm papers is one-half cent per agate line (display space), per 1,000 subscribers, and 1 cent per word (classified space), per 20,000 subscribers. The Twentieth Century Farmits circulation the rates are lower than than they guarantee. It is a weekly publication. So the fact that a name and address containing six words costs but $15.00 for a full year proves the reasonableness of these rates. If a postal card were used instead of a small ad the cost to reach 190,000 homes fifty-two times would be $57,200.

The farm paper advertising will act as a sieve, picking out the persons inerested in the advertiser's proposition, to whom he can send his more expensive catalogues and followup material.

Let's hoost for more ponitry! Let's raise birds of better quality! Lets ad-vertise our surplus birds so people will know we have them! RATMOND R. FOSTER.

What Prohibition Does.

PLAINVIEW, Neb., Feb. 7 .- To the Editor of The Bes: If a man looks carerully through your Letter Box he runs up against queer ideas. This time it is C. H. Chillian's idea to make Omaha dry. He points to the enormous advantages the town of Waterico, Is., got on account of going dry and tries to encourage Omaha people to try probibition to make Omaha the second Chicago in a few years. We cannot and do not want to contradict Mr. Gillian's statement, for prohibition may work different in Iowa than in Nebraska Our little town of Plainview went dry for several years, but after people found that they had to make up the livenee money in the city and school tressury out of their own pockets, also that part of Plain view's trade went to neighboring towns view's trade went to neighboring towns, and that whichy was used by the jug instead of boer by the glass, then Plainview people dropped the prohibition idea and voted for license and will do so until the mate goes dry.

Plainview has two saloons, but Mr. Gill ian, should be ever visit us, will find no drunkenness, crime, poverty, vagrancy and "public expense" on that account. We simply know how to regulate things and don't want to drink it all in one day. I foar prohibition would not work as favorably to Omaha as it did to Waterloo.

because Omaha is a Nebraska town, Russia is the only country on earth where it is necessary to have prohibition enforced, because the Rusians are unable world knows. Shall the United States be classed with Russia? Prohibition is agitated either by people upable to centrol themselves or by others that never tasted liquor and pronounce it "polson," or by Bee: It is pleasing to read the opinion of Robert Cowell, who says there is a wave of useless expenditures going over the country. The idea of hiring a man and giving him $50,000 to make plans for a million dollar park system and 10,000 men out of employment, and many families with just enough to eat to hold body and soul together! Better build a million dollar factory owned by the city, and give employment to the idle for there is no park so beautiful as a home, and a prosperous family of children.

"Blow to Representative Gov't."

character, it is true, but it would assure the government that aliens destring our franchise would be educated enough to read and become cognizant of our laws And claim her mine, my love. A glory and institutions.

The bill passed the lower house of con-

To my mind representative government has been dealt a severe blow. Let us encourage an alien immigration that is assimilable and amenable to a country with free institutions, but let us strongly bar the door to those who lower our standards. The present bill has been lost and those responsible will soon appear before the American people for a verdict of commendation or condemnation. So mote it be. R. S. MOTH.

hypocrites who do their drinking under ANTI-PROHIBITIONIST.

Taxpayers Demand Economy.

OMAHA, Feb. 7 .- To the Editor of The

We have plenty of parks for the next twenty-five years and have taken good care of them. Carter lake is a fine body of water and the park surrounding it is a pleasure ground for old and young. Head off this graft wave. Pay better a million dollars spent for factories will make Omaha a better place to live in, and not burden the people with useless taxes. JOHN F. BEHM.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Feb. 7 .- To the Editor of The Bee: The article of F. B. Houseman to my mind demands an answer. It is poor argument to com names, but the salient features of the defunct immigration bill can, I think, be discussed fairly.

The literacy test is not a test of gress by a two-thirds majority. The To dream too boldly, would not let me senate by a 50 to 7 vote. The democratic vote for the bill was 166, against it 191, a clear majority in the party of sixty-five votes. Should any president have power to veto any measure when the vote of our representatives, which reflects the entiment of their constituents was overwhelming in favor of its passage?

SUNNY GEMS.

Bankin-Have you never been to Ni-Phyle—Yen: but I want to go again some day and see the scenery. The first time I went I was on my honeymoon.

Judge.

Mr. Wayupp-This is a great big land of ours.

Mr. Blase—That's right, and a fellow doesn't realize it till he travels. Why, you can actually so to places in this country, where you don't owe anybody.—Puck.

"See here," said the manager of the vadueville house. "This is a had bill you gave me yesterday for a seat."
"I guess we're about even then," declared the culprit unabaned. "You gave me a had bill in exchange."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Turkey-Look at that peacock stuffed up with his own importance!

Peacock-Look at that turkey. I'd rather be stuffed with my own importance than with sage and potatoes—Baltimore American.

"What are your politics! "It depends a great deal on who hap-pened to make the speech I read last," replied the querulous person. "I'm get-ting so that every time I read anybody's speech I find something in it that makes me feel like voting for somebody else."

—Washington Star.

"Now I appeal to you as a farmer," "Now I appeal to you as a farmer, began the man with a political argument on his mind.
"Well, you needn't," replied Farmer Corntossel. "I ain't no farmer. I've read all the scientific literature about tillin the soil, an' I'm two crops in debt fur improved machinery. I'm an expert agriculturist."—Washington Star.

Young Hibbard was exhibiting his picture to a charming girl.
"This one," he said, handing her a picture, "is my photograph, taken with two French poodles. Can you recognize me?" "Why, yes, certainly," she replied, looking at it intently. "You are the one with the hat on."—Youth's Companion.

THE SECRET CHAMBER.

New York Sun. A thing of gossamer, with dewdrop crowned: I never thought to touch her, to draw About her shone serene, that bade me

The murmur of my youth's increasing fire.

And thus she died, and left the mornius drear,
As fading stars before the day retire, a maiden, white, untroubled of the world's desire.

But I-that am no longer young, have known
The strength of manhood, and have felt the sway
Of woman's love to full fruition grown.
The sweet companionship of day to day— I keep my hidden ahrine where, withered, The faded flowers of long ago entwined In shadows of the dream long dreamed away When life was young and waking love was blind, secret chamber where my boyhood love is shrined, The

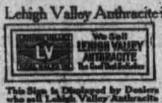

Don't Blame the Dealer

If the coal you have burned in the part has not done for you all that the best coal can do, don't blame your dealer or the coal.

Blame yourself for not having familiarized yourself with the tool problem and for not ordering the best coal obtainable, the coal that will give you the greatest amount of heat per

LEHIGH VALLEY ANTHRACITE The Coal That Satisfies

This coal is rich in carbon and therefore rich in heat units -far more so than ordinary coal. As a result it burns longer, burns more steadily, and gives more heat while it burns. There is less waste in ash because more of it burns.

Lehigh Valley Authracite is the most economical coal you can use. The next time your bin gets empty have it filled with this money saving, trouble saving coal. Your dealer will gladly supply you.

LEHIGH VALLEY COAL SALES CO. McCormick Building

These satisfied looking gentlemen have been using the

"Swappers' Column"

of The Bee. Turn to the Want Ad pages and run down the columns, Some swapper may be making an offer that would greatly interest you. Come to The Bee office and we will show you a new way of using these ads profitably at almost no cost at all to you.

Telephone Tyler 1000 THE OMAHA BEE Souphody Roads Box West Ads