What Rotary

The president of one of the Rotary clubs said recently, "I have been a Rotarian long enough now to realize that its work is to put members of themselves into the path of service to others."

An editorial in a recent issue of an answer to the question of what is the purpose of a Rotary club is a question which has been asked and answered in many ways. "A Rotary club is a group of men who, through its tendency to socialize and to meet together, are enabled to bring their business to the attention of the community at large. It is just a club of men, representing different human endeavor, who meet their business to help the community at large."

"Rotarians are not a sect or a party, and they do not put their business to the test of political affiliation. About Rotary is the question of a republic, and also of a republic, and also of a republic, and also of a republic. It doesn't conflict with the business methods of every body."

"Rotarians believe that over which they have the business of being members of a club, likewise nothing else."

"To be sure, there are many million nice people who belong to Rotary clubs. Rotarians we have seen."

The idea of Rotary is about 160 clubs, in these are located in the States, Others are in Canada, and in the U. S. The Omaha Rotary Club, over three years old, officers are H. S. Weller, president, Tom S. Kelly, secretary, S. Kelly, treasurer, H. G. Moorhead, vice-president, Walter G. Silver, treasurer."

Each Rotary club is a business, trade or industry, and it is in the city where it is located. Of course, they do not confine their patronage of the club. Such a club is a dead letter unless it is well. And this means regarding the club organized.

Service is the big thing on which the Rotary Club is based. Each Rotarian is himself to the influence of the others and they are for sincerely doing business will permit those lines.

In the fellowship come to understand and get a true perspective to each other, relations to each other, community as a whole.

At the same time sound, economic basis the fact that its members are required to invest the business atmosphere into the club meeting.

The high percentage of Rotary club members, both of their energy that characterizes the club's ideas, such as grip men and bonds that are strong.

The obligations of a Rotarian are these: To regularly, to pay one's part when a big-hearted, broad man of energy and man.

The benefits are: acquaintance with men who know: genuine, friendship, development of other men's work, processes, education to increase efficiency, desire for service to the community in general, to come naturally, acquaintance and confidence.
