Government Report on Farm Reserves Will Be Announced to Public Today.

LITTLE EFFECT ON PRICES

OMAHA, March 8, 1915.

The government report on farm reserves will be made public today. There have been many guesses as to the amount of the various grains beld by farmers in the United States and an average of the estimates sum up about as follows. Wheat, 186,00,000 bushels: corn, 38,320,000 bushels: These compare with wheat, 151,90,000 bushels; corn, 38,32,000 bushels, and oats, 419,000,000 bushels, a year ago. This report will not cut much of a figure in price making, as it is known that the country has been pretty well cleaned up of surplus wheat by exporters. Owing to the enormous wheat crop of 1914, however, the farm reserves are likely to be larger than estimated by many.

Under present conditions the May wheat OMAHA, March 8, 1915.

Inder present conditions the May wheat is likely to sell higher, and as the stocks in the elevators are almost nothing, it will be impossible for the shorts to get not of their present predicament via the will be impossible for the shorts to get out of their present predicament via the delivery route.

Those in the ranks of speculators on the Board of Trade who are friendly to orn, and among these are some of the best judges of conditions known to the world, advance the opinion that there will be smaller receipts for a time at least, as farm work is now under way in the belt, and receipts are likely to fail off still further. Exporters are taking more corn, but the east is not buying any worthy of mention.

The situation in hog products will continue to hinge on the run of hogs at the yards, coupled with the fact as to whether the outsider becomes a real participant in speculation in this market or not. The cash trade in both meats and lard has been light and the stocks of manufactured products at Chicago and in the west are large at the moment.
