OWN at Lincoln last week the high school boys of the state indulged in a basket ball tournsment, showing their athletic prowess in a series of vigorously battled contests. Whether the game is the best that might be devised for the purpose, it is useful in showing the zeal with which the lads at school are pursuing athletics as well as mere scholastics This is most commendable, for the proper training and development of the body is just as much a part of education as la the mind. It has another advantage, too, one that is of equal service to society and that is the directing of the boy's inborn love for action and excitement along orderly lines. With his natural propensity for play uncurbed, but wisely or dered, the boy learns very early some of the lessons of self-restraint and discipline that must be acquired before anything of success in life can be attained. To this end, the basket ball tournament, and its accompanying event, the field and track meet of the high schools, to come later, is doing good.

The usual reports are coming in from the training camps, till one is almost convinced that the legal maneuvers of the winter, most of which are pending as unfinished business, have not seriously affected the good, old outdoor sport of base ball, after all. Big leagues and little are getting ready for the activity of the playing season, soon to commence and, so far as the players are concerned all will be well. If the men who have their money in the game will only lay off now till October it will help business nounce the roster of the Rourke family for the coming season and will thereby set at rest a considerable degree of anxlety. Omaha folks are really interested to know what sort of ball players are to wear the local uniform during the season. Such comment as has already been heard is in praise of the selection of Marty Krug to be manager of the team, and the fans generally look to him to produce results. Krug is a more brilliant player than is generally understood. He has a faculty of making hard plays look easy, one of the attributes of all good ball pass all others. More interest has alplayers, and has never been found guilty ready begn evinced in local base ball of shirking or grand-standing, that greatest fault of young men in the game. His brain is clear, he thinks fast and knows enough of finesse to make him an excellent strategist. These qualities marked him in his work last summer, and set him apart as the one who was certain to succeed to the managerial position. Now that he has it, he will find that his conscientious work for Omaha under discouraging conditions won for him a high place in the regard of the patrons of the game, and his advent in the responsible smoother because he will have the confidence of the fans.

Old Sam Crawford is now coming to for a little of the attention he deserves. He has gone on modestly lamming out safe hits of assorted length, letting more showy players take the spotlight, untu has put up a record that is making all the wise ones take notice, and on top. of this comes word from the trainer that Sam is good to stay in base ball as long as he cares to. This is because of the fact that he takes care of himself all the time. Here is the lesson to the youngsters: If you want to shine in the world and last a long time in the game, take care of yourself.

Sioux City is making preparations to and the pennant again, and in this thoroughly justifiable ambition will meet with the consent of all hands around the loop.
