OMAHA husbands are bravely minding their dinners alone these evenings. Now this assertion is not signaling any note of alarm, and it is not because the repasts spread are less inviting than they used to be. It is that very last cup of tea his consort enjoyed at the Fontenelle that is taking the place of the wholesome substantial.

When our new and long-looked-for tea room spreads such dainty morsels and serves tea in such enticing tea things, how can any one be expected to relish a dinner, no matter how well it is done?

One loving husband says he is quite tired of enjoying his food alone, even though his fair one, sitting opposite, is entertaining to the greatest degree.

But apropos of the tea room—many of the guests have ordered their favorite spice with their tea—and invariably it has not been forthcoming. Is it because spice at the Fontenelle is served only in the original?

BREAD LAW HOLDS GOOD 118 YEARS

Philadelphia Has Not Changed Ordinance Since Days of George Washington.

BEFORE COUNCIL THURSDAY

Philadelphia has had the same bread ordinance since April 1, 1797, and this law is not regarded as any joke in the Quaker City, according to information just received by City Clerk T. J. Flynn, who was directed by the city commissioners to gather information on bread laws from various cities.

The Philadelphia bread ordinance provides that a loaf of bread shall weigh one pound avoirdupois, and that the seller must maintain regulated scales so that purchasers may verify the weight of the bread.

At the time of the passage of the Philadelphia bread law George Washington was retiring from public life and John Quincy Adams had been inaugurated only a short time. Philadelphia has not changed the law in 118 years.

The council, in committee of the whole, Monday announced the proposed new bread ordinance would be made a special order of business at 2 p. m. Thursday, when full discussion will be allowed. A delegation of master bakers attended the committee meeting, expecting that the ordinance would be disposed of. Jay Burns and C. W. Ortmann, representing the bakers' association, presented a petition to contain the signatures of 6,000 householders and taxpayers who favor the passage of the proposed ordinance, which gives the bakers the right to sell loaves of any weight if the weight is indicated.

Information received from other cities relating to bread laws shows that some cities allow bakers to offer loaves of any weight. Some cities have no specific laws on this subject.

Some of the complaints filed last week by City Prosecutor Fred Anheuser, upon information furnished by the city sealer of weights and measures, will be heard at 2 p. m. Tuesday in Justice H. H. Claiborne's court, and other complaints will be taken up in other justice courts during the week.

Insulting the Housewife's Intelligence

Just stop and think how ridiculous it is for anyone to make a statement or claim that the so-called Alum Baking Powders are in any way injurious to health. The highest authorities and most eminent scientists in the world have after careful experiments of all kinds decided that the so-called alum baking powders are just as wholesome as any other baking powders.

The Department of Agriculture, which is the Pure Food Department of the United States, have made careful investigations and experiments, and find no reason to even question their sale. They, too, came to the conclusion that such powders are just as wholesome as other baking powders.

So-called alum baking powders are sold in every State in the Union. If they were not pure and wholesome, certainly the food commissioners would not permit their sale. The Food Commissioner of each State is not permitting to be sold anything that is unwholesome. So-called alum baking powders have been brought to their attention for years, with the same results—they are pure and wholesome.

It is important that everyone should know that in the baking they do not eat baking powder. Baking powder, during the process of baking, undergoes chemical change; therefore, in an alum baking powder you eat no alum, nor do you eat it any more than the cream of tartar in a cream of tartar baking powder; but the facts are that a small percentage of residue is left in the food from the use of so-called alum baking powders, which is not injurious, and from the use of Cream of Tartar powders, a large percentage of residue is left in the food, which is Rochelle Salts.

The only one that has attempted to discredit so-called alum baking powders or claim that they are unwholesome is the $20,000,000 Baking Powder Trust, that is striving to intimidate the public so that it can continue to get the exorbitant prices for its goods, and divert the public mind from the fact that its goods leave large quantities of Rochelle Salts in the food.

Don't be misled by false, malicious, misleading advertisements. Remember so-called alum baking powders would not be allowed to be sold if they were not perfectly wholesome; also remember that 85% of the baking powders consumed in the United States are so-called alum baking powders.

CHILDREN GIVEN ESTATE

Disinherited Children of Late Richard Marnell Secure Possession of $200,000 Estate.

WILL AND DEEDS SET ASIDE
Edward W. Marnell, Mrs. Della W. Cunningham and Mrs. Kate A. Rich, children of the late Richard H. Marnell, disinherited by the will of the former, Omaha policeman and pioneer, secured possession of the $200,000 estate Monday when decrees were signed by District Judge Redick in two suits which were pending.

By the terms of a settlement for $3,000, approved by County Judge Crawford, no resistance was made by Mrs. Mamie Connelly of Milwaukee and Mrs. Anna E. Long of Omaha, nieces of the dead man and heirs by the will and by deeds signed before his death. The will was set aside by Judge Crawford on the ground that Marnell was mentally incompetent to make it and an appeal was dismissed in accordance with the terms of the settlement.

A deed of property to Mrs. Connelly and a contract of sale to Mrs. Long, signed by Marnell prior to his death, which took place December 7, 1912, were set aside by Judge Redick on the ground that Marnell was incompetent and was subject to insane delusions. Marnell, who was an Omaha pioneer, was 75 years old when he died. He accumulated large holdings of real estate and was known as a reclusive. Many years ago he served for a long period on the Omaha police force.

Mrs. Cunningham, Mrs. Rich and Edward W. Marnell was given immediate possession of the real estate by Judge Redick's decree.

Child Labor Exhibit Will Arrive Sunday

The traveling child labor exhibit, sent out by the National Child Labor committee in charge of Miss Josephine Eichenbrenner, will be installed in the Pioneer association's rooms in the court house next Sunday. The exhibit will be open free to the public every day for a week, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 6 p. m., and also for several evenings during the week.

About fifteen local women's organizations are co-operating to bring the exhibit to Omaha and committees from each will act as hostesses during the week. H. D. Geppon, chairman of the state child labor committee, is head of the committee of arrangements.

Spring Opening Draws Big Crowd

The Nebraska Clothing company's women's wearing apparel and millinery sections are entertaining large and enthusiastic crowds of women, the occasion being their annual spring opening. A beautiful transformation is noted in these departments. An entirely new collection of wearing apparel and millinery having been assembled for the formal opening. It is understood that the advance spring stocks of this house have already been disposed of, which enables the Nebraska to offer this complete exposition of the newest and most authentic creations. Besides the exquisite models and reproductions of celebrated couturiers, the Nebraska is showing probably the largest selection in the city of practical wearing apparel. Speaking of this feature of their business, Mr. Hershberg, the manager of this department, said, "We keep in close touch at all times with the style developments in New York City. One of our buyers is in the eastern market every other week. We not only watch the fashion changes in the east, but modify the new productions to conform with the western demand of the well-dressed women of this community, who like to wear splendid styles, but not the overdrawn models of the extremists." The opening will continue all week.
