ROURKES TO PLAY THE LINKS TODAY

Journey to Capital City to Battle the Western League Team at that Point.

PLAY HERE END OF THE WEEK

Today Marty Krug pilots his cargo of live stock to the well known capital city to lick the spots off of the lowly Links who abide there. Krug figures on trimming the Links twice, today and tomorrow, in their home village just to show the populace the superiority of Omaha over Lincoln. Marty has the right idea. Following the administration of defeats at Lincoln the two teams will come to Omaha to resume hostilities in this city Saturday and Sunday. Friday will be an off day.

Yesterday was a short day for the athletes. Marty put his men through a light practice during the noon hour when the sun was highest, least warm and the wind was coldest. The hired hands, who are not yet hired, huddled up under the north fence and did the best they could to prove that they are bubbling over with pep, but the exhibition was rather sad as even an athlete finds it difficult to be happy and gay when persistent and chilly winds breeze up and down his back.

The rain of Tuesday dawned put the blink on the infield for practice purposes so Groundkeeper Stoddard put his garden tools into play. Stoddard has a bunch of tools which look like a veterinary surgeon's outfit and he fussed and fumed around until he had the diamond looking like a European war trench. He will continue to manure the sod today and tomorrow so that everything will be in swell condition for the Lincoln combats Saturday and Sunday.

Tom Bidgett almost ruined things for Stoddard by insisting on chasing balls around the infield. Every time an athlete busted the pill into that territory from the fence Tom went after it, much to the disgust of the said Mr. Stoddard. Ralph Willis was the chosen child yesterday. He was excused from practice as he worked against St. Paul Monday and trimmed the men from the north. Whenever a pitcher ticks an adversary he is given a holiday the next day as the fruit of victory. Thus it can be seen why pitchers like to win.

Down with It.

The ancient stranger who occupied the other side of my table looked up with a start as I ordered a cocktail. "Young man," he said tremulously, "think what you are doing! It grieves me to the heart to see a human being steeping his brain with poison! You know the old saying, 'When alcohol comes in at the door, nobody home.' Wiping his brow with a trembling hand, he continued, 'I once was a rum sot, though to look at me now you would never believe it. I will tell my story, young man, that it may prove to you your folly. Up until five years ago, I drank eye-openers on waking in the morning, appetizers between meals, cocktails before meals and cordials after them. 'Young man, I was a wreck! And then one night I had a dream. My mother-in-law appeared to me in a vision and warned me that unless I fore-swear my evil ways, I would come to grief. And from that hour, I have not touched alcohol in any form. 'Temperance, that is my watchword, young man; temperance! Waiter is this my seventh or eighth cup of coffee?' 'Eight, sir,' replied the waiter. 'Well, bring the other six all in together,' said the old man. And with a shaking hand, he dropped his cup and broke it.—Detroit Free Press
