MAIDA SENTENCED FOR MAILING OBSCENE MATTER

Daniel Mlade wept copiously in federal court yesterday, where he was awaiting sentence after pleading guilty to mailing obscene letters from Scottsbluff, Neb., to the young daughter of an Italian fruit vendor in Omaha. So obscene were the letters that they were not quoted in the grand jury indictment. The father and daughter were brought into court and testified. Mlade served two terms, one of nineteen months and one of twenty months, in the Illinois penitentiary, violating his parole after being released each time. He has been living in Omaha for several years and traveling through the west as a musician. Judge Lewis sentenced him to sixty days in jail. He had already been in jail four months.

New Books

ANGELA'S RIVALRY. By Henry Sydney Harrison. 375 pp. $1.50. Houghton Mifflin company.
Although Angela lends her name to the title she shares the honor of being heroine with her cousin, Mary Wing. Mary is assistant principal of the city high school. She supports her mother and herself comfortably and is a person of some distinction in educational circles. Angela, on the contrary, is a newcomer. She is an only daughter and her activities are centered in her home life, so that, in spite of Mary's friendship, she is often lonely for the companionship of her own sort of young people. The problem of fixing her place in society is as important to Angela as the ambition to advance in her profession is to Mary. Both are keenly alive to their advantages and their handicaps; and the contrast between them is shown, sometimes with much humor, in their effect upon the young author, Charles Garrott, who has studied up his book as a class and thinks he has little to learn about the sex. Mary and Angela "keep him guessing" and the end of the story leaves him in a humbler and more becoming spirit.

FOR THE HONOR OF HIS HOUSE. By Andrew Rousar. 312 pp. $1.50. G. W. Dillingham company.
The MacWhineries are a typical Scots family, well satisfied with themselves and generously endowed with the national virtues of industry and thrift. But of all the family, Robert was the flower, and from boyhood up his brothers had been accustomed to accept deprivations in order that Robert's career might be secure. In the iron industry where he worked, the head of the firm regarded Robert with favor as a suitor for his daughter, Margaret. But until he fell in love with Margaret, all Robert's heart had been given to his sister, Jean. When the blow fell, shattering his hopes into fragments, he was forced to choose between his sister and his love.

THE TAMING OF AMORETTE. By Anne Warner. 316 pp. $1. Little Brown & Co.
When Amorette married Geoffrey Girard, she made promise that she might be as nice as she liked to other men. Amorette was a terrible flirt, though she was very fond of her husband. Her love of coquetry, her lust for admiration, her inclination to respond to the subtle, unexpressed, and even unlooked-for invitation of man, as man, was strong within her. The unusual method adopted by the husband to cure his attractive wife of her interest in other men is told in a clever comedy that abounds in the bright dialogue.

JOHNNY APPREHENDED. By Eleanor Atkinson. $1.50. Harper & Bros.
A sympathetic story of a real character of unusual personality. All the romance of our early frontier life, with its hardships, its courage, its sacrifices and its joys, fills the pages of the book. It is a portion of our border life that waited to be written, not the fighting only, but the upbuilding, the conquering of the forests, the making of the wilderness blossom.

But Uncle Terry could not set his heart on such riches when it was already full of affection for an adopted daughter.

more brilliant and highly prized than any gem from the mines, and one who could not fail to attract young men in the way that is old, yet ever new.

THE DIARY OF A BEAUTY. By Molly Elliott Seawell. 212 pp. $1.25. J. R. Lipincott company.
From assistant postmaster in a small New England village to the owner of a mansion on Fifth avenue is the story told by "Beauty" herself, Miss Haverford, the ancient aristocratic, wealthy spinster; Hugh Bindon, the fighting young lawyer, who lives romances, and Victor Leblanc, the fascinating playboy who dreams them, are well drawn, and while admitting that "her face is her fortune" the author has kept "Beauty" from burning incense before herself, and the tale is delightfully told.

MARRIAGE BY CONQUEST. By Warwick Deering. 312 pp. $1.50. McBride, Nast & Co.
All the boisterous Doomsday squires accepted as final Dick Heron's boast that he would win by his sword against all rivals the beautiful and reluctant Widow of Shenstone. He did not see the shadow that crossed his path, when John Flambar, the scholar fellow, rode through the gates of the old Flambar estate to become against his will and taste a Sussex squire. Richard Heron of Rush Heath, had an iron wrist and mesmerizing eye, but he had soon to discover a quiet, masterful power in John Flambar's straight back and thews of iron. This novel is dramatic and well knit and centers about the conflict of two strong men of contrasted characters.

BARBARA'S MARRIAGE. By Maude Radford Warren. $1.35. Harper & Bros.
When we first met Barbara Langworthy she is an unhappy young girl living in a little Virginia town with her brother and the sickly, ill-tempered wife he had married solely for her money. Barbara was untrained and knew of no possible method by which she could earn her living, and escape from her tyrannical sister-in-law. Then suddenly a way of deliverance appeared in an offer of marriage from middle-aged Huntley Rhodes, but on their wedding journey both Barbara's husband and brother are killed in an automobile accident, and her sister-in-law, transformed by the shock into a pariah invalid, holds Barbara responsible and claims her services as nurse and companion. From the slavery of her life she is at length rescued through the intervention of two men, Stephen Thornton and John Hare. At Hare's suggestion and through his planning Barbara spends a summer in the Sierras, where Hare makes vigorous love to her and wins her heart. But Barbara, in her ignorance of men, does not realize how fundamental is the lack in Hare which he frankly confesses—his inability to love with complete devotion. Deceived by the man's ardor, she allows herself to be drawn into a kind of experimental love affair. The story distinguishes with delicacy and insight the elements that enter into the love of man and woman. At last, matured but not embittered, she finds her natural mate.

THE HARBOR. By Ernest Poole. $1.40.
The Macmillan company with the social and industrial tendencies of the day and centers their action and interest around the harbor of New York, to which the title refers. The great business enterprise and the commerce to which the harbor is the breath of life play a vital part in the story. Through much interest in them and much study of them the hero, who is destined to become a great author, comes finally to see the inner meaning of things.
