Union Pacific and Burlington in s Big Deal for the Through Business.

TO USE U. P. WEST OF DENVER

Passenger traffic officials of roads having through car arrangements with the Union Pacific on western business are considerably exercised over the tie-up that the Overland day, and will be held at the auditorium. system has made with the Burlington to handle its cars west from Denver.

Saturday The Bee announced that effective May 30, the Burlington would haul the cars over its own rails to Denver and there they would be turned over to the Union Pacific to be hauled to Ogden, there to be taken on by the Southern Pacific.

Now it seems that these cars are to start from Chicago over the Burlington and run through St. Louis, and from there on routed as stated. This, however, only told half the story, for according to the agreement entered into by the Union Pacific and Burlington, May and daily thereafter, the Burlington will run a Chicago train through Omaha, and from here it will go to Denver, where it will be consolidated with the Chicago-St. Louis train and turned over to the Union Pacific. This will be an absolutely new train out of Denver and over the Union Pacific will be hauled to Ogden, where it will be split, one part going on to San Francisco, over the outhern Pacific and hauled by Southern Pacific engines. The other part will be taken over by the San Pedro and will be hauled to Los Angeles. Similar arrangements will apply on the eastbound busi-

As it is figured out at this time, the Burlington will have enough passengers to fill a train off the two trains into Denver. In the event it should not, the Union Pacific reserves the right to attach its cars at points enroute.

This tie-up is the sennation in railroad circles, as it is known that in the past the Burlington has used the Denver & Rio Grande exclusively from Denver to Ogden, and that west of there it has had close traffic arrangements with the Western Pacific. This latest move is taken by railroad men here to mean that the Hill and Goud systems have broken, or partially broken off the friendly relations that have existed since the completion of the Western Pacific.

It is also taken to mean, say the railmen, that it indicates a possible break between the Union Pacific, Northwestern and the Milwaukee, and that the traffle arrangements by which the first named road has been hauling the care of the two roads last named may end In the near future.

Union Pacific officials here are not talking, merely asserting that the new move is solely for business. Officials of the other roads intrested are not close enough to the inner circles, so that they feel at liberty to express opinions as to what the new move on the railroad ch ckerboard means.

OMAHA MEN FURNISH DATA

Omalia committees interested in the Missouri river navigation project, will now co-operate with Lieutenant Colemel Herbert Deakyne, United States army in furnishing him data to be used in his oreliminary report to the government on the condition of the river and the pos brasks, according to the crop and soil sible tonnage that could be expected out of Omaha, in cese a barge line is to be established between Omahs and Kansas City. J. W. Gamble and Robert Manley, a committee of two from the Commercia condition. Added to the rain of last club, have returned from Kansas City, where they went Saturday and conferred with the lieutenant colonel to get ideas of ways in which Omaha might co-operate

Lieutenant Colonel Deakyne is to make a preliminary report to the government, upon which report is to be based the pinion as to whether a thorough survey of the river with a view of removing snage and making it a navigable reach is to be undertaken by the government His report is to contain a recommendation that the survey be made or be not made. He has just concluded a trip on a water craft from Sloux City to Kansas City. He passed through Omaha on the river several days ago.

Gamble and Manley also looked into the condition of the barge line business of the Kansas City Missouri River Navigacompany at Kansas City, boats are making regular trips, have suffered no delays, the business in on a paying basis, and there is more freight than the lists those who are not qualified. the company can handle now," said Mr. Manley. The Omaha men talked to shippers in Kansas City who said that the matter had grown beyond the point where they were giving the barge line business merely to be loyal, and that as a matter of fact they are giving it business nov because they get the service and save
