At first the fathers were shy. But no got them with a straight-punch speech, and soon he had organized the first father's club in the world. Enthusiasm grew, and soon other clubs were organized in other school districts. Today there are fourteen fathers' clubs of Councll Bluffs.

These clubs have shown a wonderful interest in school affairs, the condition of school houses, the kind of teachers employed, the conditions of heat, ventilation and sewerage. They have taken up the cigarette law in Iowa and are taking steps toward preventing the sale of tobacco to minors. They have found a little school house in the west mud flats that is so miserable and so far forgotten by the authorities that for a time they could not learn whether it was an Omaha or a Council Bluffs school house. They took steps to get it into better shape. They are taking an interest in everything in the city and state that in any way affects the welfare of their children and they are coming to find that pretty nearly everything in the state does effect this in one way or the other. 'As fathers we are failures and worse than failures," says Stovenson. "We must get together and learn how to be intell gent and efficient fathers."

Berg Buys Out the Entire Clothing Stock of Geo. Pray

The entire spring clothing stock George Pray & Co. has been bought by the Berg Clothing company and will be offered at the latter's store at half price, beginning Saturday morning. Lack of room for all his departments was the reason for Mr. Pray's decision to discontinue his clothing line, which included clothes of the Alfred Benjamin and other good makes. Pray will con-

Growing serious, Mr. Foster added that he devotes most of his attention to the grade schools, because statistics show that two-thirds of those entering the lower public schools never go to high schools at all; therefore, the grade school means much to a great majority of the attendants.

Thomas A. Fry said he felt like a certain colored man in the south, who, upon being asked to change a $10 bill, replied that he was unable to grant the favor, but thanked the stranger for his compliment.

Dr. E. Holovichiner referred to the hard work of the principals and related an observation he made of a principal mending some of the curtains in her school.
