New Books

Fiction.

PALS FIRST. By Francis P. Elliott. 222 pp. $1.50. Harper & Bros. The "pals" are two nobles, whose conversation reveals that they have been prisoners and that one is still "wanted." Both have fallen from the class of educated men; the elder has been a clergyman of the Church of England. Tired, ragged, hungry, they are introduced weakly tramping a dusty road, which leads them to an apparently deserted mansion in Tennessee, instead of to the town they are seeking. An old negro in charge thinks he sees in the younger traveler the master of the house, absent for a year in Europe, wherein the former proceeds with great audacity to impersonate his apparent double, not to the domestics alone, but to the friends, and even to the betrayer of the vanished "Dick"—all to the terror of his old companion, whose dormant conscience at last asserts itself to save the trusting sib from marriage with the masquerader. The reader's nerves are kept in a state of almost painful tension, again and again the daring young hero appears to be on the very brink of detection.

THE HOLY FLOWER. By H. Rider Haggard. 32 pp. $1.50. Longmans Green & Co.

The holy flower was a wonderful orchid worshipped as a god by a certain wild people known as the Pongos, who lived in a particularly inaccessible part of Africa. Three white men, Stephen Somers, enthusiastic orchidist; our old friend Allan Quartermain, and brother John, of whom nothing was known save he was an American who had been wandering through Central Africa for many years, make up an expedition to visit this unexplored country, and each adventure is more exciting than the one that came before it. There is not a dull moment in the story, and running through the tale is the story of a love that never faltered during long years, inspiring a man to a fine fearlessness which was ready to brave any peril.

A DEALER IN EMPIRE. By Amelia Josephine Burr. 228 pp. $1.25. Harper & Bros.

A historic novel of Soghi in the seventeenth century, picturing its magnificence and cruelty, its court intrigues, and the dangers and the devotion of women. How is told the dramatic story of the great and ambitious Olivares who dreamed of welding an empire to conquer the world.

COME-ON CHARLEY. By Thomas Addison. 32 pp. $1.25. G. W. Dillingham company.

"Come-on" Charley Carter receives a $10,000 bequest with the proviso that if he will make it grow to $1,000,000 in a certain length of time he will then receive $2,000. He and Percival Testers, facetiously known as "Merciful Skeeters," go to New York and at once become targets for the "con" men. How these crooks are outwitted at their own game is cleverly told.

THE MAN OF IRON. By Richard Dehner. 96 pp. $1.25. Frederick A. Stokes company.

The story is laid in the period before and during the Franco-Prussian war of 1870. Elmarck, the man who spent a lifetime of preparation and finally plunged ruthlessly into war in order to serve the German empire, is the dominating figure. The hero is P. C. Breach, a young Irish war correspondent, hot-headed, plucky, proud, resourceful. The heroine is a highly strung French girl, daughter of an army officer, who under the press of circumstances finds herself at the front. Here is a wealth of material for character plot and situation. The author makes full use of it.

REALM OF THE EAGLE. By M. Wells. 291 pp. $1.50. The Macmillan company.
