AT A RECENT bridge party given at the Fontenelle a Chicago matron who is noted for her skill at the game was among the guests invited. This young woman is a very good looking blonde and on all occasions she is noticed and remarked on for her smart attire.

Another prominent characteristic of the referred to person is that she is invariably the late guest, a habit indulged in, her friends say, so that she may be sufficiently gazed upon at entrance.

Just at this time she was stopping at the hotel and was conveniently located to be on time. Long after the hour for the affair, however, she sauntered forth clad in the most elegant of raiment with repose and composure—the repose to be cruelly shocked when, at the door of the card room, she noticed that all had been seated many minutes and were buried deeply in the confusion of bridge thoughts and her entrance was a blank even to the hostess.

Several hands of the game had been played and there was place for her only at a table where three who knew not the racking puzzles of bridge leads were blissfully enjoying a game of rummy. To be unnoticed was enough, but for her quick-witted bridge fingers to have to draw a rummy game was too much!

WORKHOUSE EXPERT EXPLAINS METHODS

Frank McDonald of Minneapolis Here on Invitation of Omaha Business Men.

EXPERT ON WORKHOUSES TALKS TO BUSINESS MEN.

Frank McDonald

TO HELP BEAUTIFY THE CITY

Frank McDonald, superintendent of the Minneapolis Industrial Educational farm, the foremost expert on workhouses and work farms in the United States, is here by invitation of the Commercial club to tell Omaha how it should go about establishing a workhouse.

In an hour's address at noon at the Commercial club and in an informal talk to county officials at the court house, Mr. McDonald graphically detailed his experience at Minneapolis in building up an institution which this year will pay into the city treasury $64,000, an excess of $12,000 over its cost of maintenance, in addition to improving the moral and physical condition of hundreds of men and women.

The invitation was extended by the Commercial club, following a suggestion by County Commissioner John C. Lynch, who visited the Minneapolis workhouse three years ago. A law passed by the last legislature enables Douglas county to establish a workhouse and farm.

Does Not Like One Clause. Mr. McDonald endorsed the law with the exception of the clause requiring prisoners to be sentenced first to the county jail, leaving them under control of the sheriff. He criticized this vigorously.

"You couldn't find a high class man in the United States to be superintendent of your workhouse under a sheriff unless there is a man living in Omaha capable of doing the work, who would be able to cope with the situation by reason of being familiar with local conditions," he declared.

"My theory of a workhouse is that it should be self-supporting and should return a profit, which may be used for maintenance of the prisoners' families and for themselves; that the city should use all its products and that none of these should be sold in the open market," said Mr. McDonald. "The prisoners should do any work that will beautify or build up the city."

"For instance? we are making 4,000,000 building bricks a year, which have been used by the city in the building of schools, and 2,000,000 sewer bricks, which have gone into the city's sewers."

Helps Build Hospital.
"We built the beautiful Hopewell hospital for saving the city $35,000 over the lowest contractor's estimate and other buildings with similar savings."

"These are some of the business aspects of the workhouse, but I pay more attention to its value from a humanitarian standpoint and regard it as of greater importance. An industrial education farm properly describes my theory. Prisoners are sent out after serving their sentences with knowledge of how to do work well."

"We have a liquor cure which was effective in 60 out of 100 cases. We have successfully treated a large percentage of drug victims."

No Fence Around Farm.
Although Mr. McDonald is opposed to suns or shackles in handling prisoners and there is no fence around the Minneapolis work farm there have been no escapes from it so far this year and there were only two last year.

Saturday night assemblies in which music and other forms of entertainment, short talks by the superintendent and conversation among the prisoners are features are a part of the regular routine in the Minneapolis institution.

Mr. McDonald is opposed to the prison labor contract system and criticizes vigorously crowded unsanitary conditions in penitentiaries.

In speaking at the Commercial club at noon Mr. McDonald condemned the compensation clause in the Nebraska work

Postal Savings Bank System is Extended

Every person in the United States 10 years old or over may open an account in a postal savings bank after July 1, according to an instructive leaflet on the postal savings system just issued by Postmaster General Burleson. This important extension of the service will be made possible by permitting persons living in communities as sparsely settled as not to justify the designation of their local postoffices as regular postal savings banks to open accounts by mail.

Under the plan adopted by the postmaster general for opening accounts by mail an intending depositor, residing where there is no postal savings bank, will apply to his local postmaster, who will see that necessary identification data is prepared and forwarded to a nearby postoffice authorized to accept deposits. The intending depositor will then be given permission to forward his deposits by money order or registered mail to the postmaster at the banking point for which receipts or certificates will be issued. He may withdraw his savings by mail and on demand, together with any interest that may be due him. See Want Ads Produce Results.

Thieves Forget Loot in Rush to Escape

Timely arrival of the family of G. T. Epeneter at their home, 512 North Fortieth street, at 11 o'clock, Sunday night, after an auto ride, prevented the loss of quantities of silverware, furs, clothing and other valuables, which burglars had piled up on the dining room table, after ransacking the house. When the burglars heard the family reach the house they made a hasty exit, leaving most of their intended booty behind. Only a small amount of jewelry and clothing was missed. No description of the burglars was obtained.
