Here's the Press Agent; the Show Is Coming Today

Odd bodkins. All of which has nothing to do with the story. It was simply the way in which the press agent started his recital—and since this has to do with press agents and elephants and blood sweating behemoths and other thing of the wild animal type, the expression is allowed to remain.

In spite of that fact that it has nothing to do with the case. For the real point at hand is that the aforementioned press agent and other animals are soon to come into their own. Today there will roll into Omaha the long, gaudy mantled circus of the Sells-Floto circus and Buffalo Bill's Original Wild West, for one-day stay, with everything from forty clowns to the original and only Buffalo Bill and his Deadwood stagecoach.

The show will give two performances here, displaying wondrous and marvelous depictions of diction and distinct integrity.

Reg pardon? Yes, by accident the press agent was being quoted. It should not occur again. To speak of things rainily, the circus this year promises many features. Among them is a wonderful girder rider, Rosa Rossland, who turns flip flops, alreata, front and back somersaults from the back of a horse, that in turn trots upon a raised ring—the first one in the circus business. Then, too, there is Kid McCoy, the famous prize fighter, who will present an innovation in circus acts.

And, of course, there will be Buffalo Bill, with his Indians and his other features of a wild west end of the entertainment, which he personally has supervised. Colonel Cody is to appear with the show, to lead the parades and to appear in the performances, where he gives his famous salute from the saddle.

The circus will exhibit at Twenty-first and Paul streets, with a reserved seat sale today at Meyers & Dillon's drug store.

Uncle Sam Auctions Off Some Villa Sites

In the past Uncle Sam has been parceling out the land among the farmers and others who would go upon and improve the same by making it bear crops. Another plan has been adopted and now the government is about to offer some tracts, intending to attract the attention of the rich and those who can afford summer homes far from centers of population.

July 26, at public auction Uncle Sam is going to offer at auction 955 tracts that are termed "villa" sites. They range from two to five acres. They are all located around Flathead lake, far removed from railroad and civilization in Montana, and right in the heart of the Rocky mountains. The lake is thirty miles long and fifteen wide. The land to be sold at auction is a part of the Flathead Indian reservation.

Wet Weather is Delaying Harvest

The weather bureau's Washington crop and weather report of current date has the following to say relative to the grain harvest:

In the winter wheat belt, between the Appalachian and Rocky mountains, damp, rainy weather in many parts delayed the harvest and hurt grain standing in field and shock, especially in Oklahoma and portions of surrounding states. In Atlantic and Pacific coast states harvesting is proceeding rapidly under favorable conditions. In the spring wheat belt it was mostly cold and wet, but crop made good growth. In the northwestern states hot, dry winds axbut caused some injury. In the corn belt cold and wet weather continued, and cultivation and growth, in many important states, still further delayed. The crop is late and plants small over all northern districts. Further south it is much more favorable, and in many sections an excellent yield is assured. Hay and harvesting oats were delayed, and some rust in oats and damage to hay is reported.

RAIN STOPS AUTO TRADE TRIP TO THE IOWA TOWNS

The automobile trade tour to run out of Omaha for a one-day run into Iowa territory for this morning has been postponed until Tuesday, July 13. Reports early yesterday showed that last night's rain yielded from three-fourths to one and one-half inches over most of the territory the tour had expected to take. This means that the roads will be all but impassable for a few days, so the whole trip was just shopped over for nearly a week.

HEAVY RAIN ALONG ELKHORN

Forces the River Out of Its Banks at Stanton—Rail in Butler County.

WEATHER HAS CLEARED UP

According to reports to the railroad rains were general over Nebraska Tuesday night, being heaviest north of the Platte river, though south of there the precipitation was from one-half to three-fourths of an inch.

From Fremont northwest up the Elkhorn valley and as far west as O'Neill the rain reached flood proportions, in many localities aggregating two to three inches. In many sections the storm was accompanied by high, though not damaging, winds. In Butler county, between Dwight and Abbie, a distance of some thirty miles, a strip of country from one to three miles wide was visited by a hail-storm that continued nearly an hour. Hail as large as eggs fell, damaging crops greatly.

In the vicinity of Stanton the rain took on the proportions of a waterpout, three inches falling inside of an hour. The Elkhorn river at this point was thrown out of its banks, sweeping across the Northwestern road, covering 500 feet of track to a depth of four to ten inches. Considerable damage was done, but repairs were quickly made and trains passed over the break before noon.

All through the sandhill country in the northern part of Nebraska there was from one to three inches of rain. Reports indicated that the weather has cleared and that the rain is over for a time.
