DEAF GIRL VICTIM ATTEMPT ASSAULT

South Omaha Man Drags Her Into Weeds, but Her Screams Frighten Him Away.

NEIGHBORS WILL PROSECUTE
Marion Cummings, 15-year-old deaf mute daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cummings, 3513 Polk street, was assaulted by Andrew Teshack, Thirty-sixth and T streets, South Side, as the former was going to a mail box near her home to mail a letter Thursday evening at 8:45 o'clock.

Dragging the girl, who is able to understand people only by having them write what they want to say on a paper, into a clump of weeds in the vicinity of Thirty-eighth and Jackson streets, the young man fought with the girl for several minutes. Her cries aroused nearby residents, but when they arrived, Teshack had fled.

Less than an hour later, after the mother of the girl had notified the police, the man was arrested by Motorcycle Officer Bert Hiatt and placed in a cell at the police station. He confessed to police officers his attempt to do the girl injury.

Neighbors of the parents are greatly aroused over the affair and will prosecute the case in court.

Bonorden of the Great Western will induce in select reading and L. J. Beindorf of the Union Pacific will deliver a lecture on health, explaining how he gained ten pounds in weight in as many days.

The case and dispatch with which the buyers were handled has been the subject of comment. Occupying a space of over 11,000 square feet, the shoe sale afforded ample space for the movement of vast numbers. An array of salespeople furnished swift, sure service to everyone.

THOUSANDS VISIT THE BRANDEIS SHOE SALE
The dollar sale of shoes at the Brandeis stores this week is considered one of the remarkable and interesting events of that store's history.

It is estimated that 3,000 people have moved through the aisles in the first two days of the sale, being, however, evenly distributed throughout the whole period.

SOUTH SIDE PIONEER DIES

Robert C. Walker, with Cudahy Plant Twenty-Eight Years, Passes Away.

Robert C. Walker, aged 54 years, pioneer resident of South Omaha and Bellevue, many years head of the Dutch Cleanser factory of the local Cudahy Packing company, died at his home in Bellevue this morning at 2:15 o'clock after a two years' illness with cancer.

ONE of the babes of the Child Savings institute is enjoying a real change of scene just now. We might call it an outing, for such it would be if the tiny thing was more than 13 months old, but at any rate it has had different surroundings to roll its eyes upon during the last week.

Miss Margaret Bruce in her interest in the work of the Child Savings institute ran across this little bit of humanity and immediately took a special interest in the infant. She was most anxious to give it personal care for a week and went to the mother for permission. Reluctantly the mother consented, and last Saturday Miss Bruce began to entertain her little house guest. Friends have been going in and out of the Bruce home this week to see the little guest, who plans to remain with her hostess until the end of the week.

MADAME BEATRICE GOLDIE, president of the Made-in-America club, who agrees with the vote of the Harvard Summer school girls that 25 is about the right age for a girl to marry.

MADAME BEATRICE GOLDIE.
"These college girls have the right idea," Mrs. Beatrice Goldie said with emphasis. "Any woman knows that it is desperately hard work to make $200 a year spread over the wants of two people. Selecting a husband means selecting his pocketbook. Love flies out of the window pretty fast when the grocery and rent man have to alternate every other month waiting for their bill. "Girls make a bigger mistake in ignoring material things when they select the man they mean to live with the rest of their lives."
