WHY AUTO PRICES ARE ON DECLINE

Enormous Production and Standardization of Manufacture Forces Reshaping This Market.

CARS ARE AS GOOD AS EVER

By GEORGE L. SULLIVAN. A striking feature of the past spring has been the sharp reduction in the prices of several leading "makes" of automo-Manufacturers who have been keening watch of tendencies in the automobile market-on the theory that it was, in a way, a barometer of consumer mands-must have speculated at its rapidly changing aspects. Briefly phrased, our old friend, Saturation Point, has been issuing his rules and regulations. Automobile manufacturers who have created large plants and, by liberal advertising, have laid the ground work of prestige for a big future output cannot let go. If they cannot sell a "class" car at a "class" price, they must forget their pride of place and go where Fisiness is.

I do not think there ever has been an opportunity like the present one for manufacturers to watch, right out in the open for all to see, the vital play and interplay of the forces of market mak-

About a year ago, at the time the cyclecar threatened to invade the automobile market, a very shrewd observer of automobile conditions in this country made this remark;

The trouble with us in this country is that we began to build automobiles at the top of the pyramid of prices. The little section at the top of the pyramid was quickly filled. Then makers began to realize that the nearer they approached the base of the pyramid in prices the wider they increased their angle of possible customers, and with every remade it possible for a constantly in-

Automobiles since their first manufacture, or more correctly after a period covering two or three years immediately following the inception of the industry, have had a constant tendency to drop in price The betterment of the product has kept constant pace with tis downward trend in prices, so that today it is possible to buy an automobile fully equipped, with everything that the owner may desire, at about one-third the price he would have been asked for a less perfect product even five years ago, and to which he would have had to add as extras, and at an additional expense, such things as windshield, top, horn, speed-

With every succeeding season the publio asks itself how much lower the automobile can go and still be worth buying. Enormous production and standardization of manufacture have been largely responsible for the reduction in prices. It it obvious that when a manufacturer turns out 200,000 units all exactly alike. his overhead per unit and cost of materials and labor are very low in com-

of a number of models.

This multiplicity of models was the sause a few years ago of nearly wrecking one very large manufacturer who was very well known. When the reor-

The reduction of prices this year has made a very deep impression on the buying public. A car that has been selling for two seasons at $1,075 has been reduced to $750. It is identically the same car. Another model selling at $1,560 has been reduced to $1,860. This, too, is identically the same car as at the higher This reduction has been duplicated in many instances.

The question must inevitably arise in the mind of the man who paid $1,550 as to whether or not he had furnished the manufacturer, distributer and dealer an unjust profit. And this question may be truthfully answered "no," because at the time he purchased his car the cost of production at the factory was nately higher than at the present time.

Another question which comes up to every thinking man at the present time is be its affect in the purchase of an automobile? The first significance of it has been touched on above, L e., the stration at that place. ability of the manufacturer to produce The Bull tractor is handled by the Bul-at less cost and his willingness to give lock Machinery Supply company of product at less cost.

On June 16 he reported that he had for delivery between then and July 4 over 100 orders and that he had turned down the ten days previous twenty-five orders for cars rather than accept them and disappoint his customers later on

He is known everywhere as possibly the shrewdest retail sales manager in New York. He said: "I have been selling automobiles for ten years. I have never known anything like the present rush for cars. We are literally selling the n over the telephone and we have just losed the biggest year in our history several other makers have also enjoyed sanner years."

who is a deep thinker along preduction lines says that the plans of the largest manufacturers who turn out 5,000 and less cars a year, call for the production of close to a million cars in this country

What the insurance companies would call "actuarial figures" show that this country can absorb between gix and seven hundred thousand new cars every

This observer points out that the production of a million cars means a production of one car for every one hundredth person of the entire population of the United States-man, woman and child. Bused on the average life of a car of three years, and taking into consideration the growing tendency for a man to keep his car more than one season, these figures would provide one new car a season for every thirty-third person of the entire population of the United States-man, woman and child. He predicts an enormous over-production and it is not expected that foreign conditions will better themselves sufficiently soon to make the foreign market a dumping-ground for any of this surplus.

Already, some of the larger manutacturers have grasped this fact and have curtailed their original plans for enormous productions. In one case a concern making 10,000 cars this year announces 75,000 for the coming year, but have cut that to 50,000. Even with these reductions, this man thinks that there will be a great overproduction.

Every year the automobile is coming to be more certainly a utility. The man who drives fifty miles into the country of a Sunday afternoon and fifty miles back is not nearly as numerous, with the exception of the enthusiastic brand-new owner, as he was a year ago. He is going back to his golf, his tennia, his gardening or his quiet Sunday at home, and the car stands in the garage or is used to bring his guests from the station only.

A striking instance of this, which is developing all over the country, is observed in a very small Jersey town. This year eight men, whose average income is not over $4,000 a year, have duction of $100 or $300 in any model they purchased automobiles. They are used almost entirely by the women of the creasing proportion of Americans to pur- families to run over to the country town for shopping and to the neighboring golf-courses for a round of golf. But these cars are used very little by the men. Perhaps not more than once a week for the mere sport of riding somewhere and coming back. I look to see automobile selling and advertising proceeding from now on with some degree of certainty as to possible demand. Every well-wisher of the industry can ask nothing better than that aukomobiles be sold on their utility basis, for being so sold, they will in the main be sanely sold.
