Nebraska REED GETS WATER DATA

TRIP TO DENVER WILL RESULT IN PLEA OF INTERVENTION IN COLORADO. Wyoming Suit. BIG HARVEST IN RED WILLOW (From a Staff Correspondent.) LINCOLN, Aug. 10.—(Special.)—Attorney General Reed thinks the data he was able to secure at Denver relative to the rights of water users in western Nebraska, and now threatened in the litigation between Wyoming and Colorado, will be of much value should this state decide to intervene. The attorney general spent three days at Denver and will later go to Cheyenne to collect additional evidence. Wyoming brought suit against Colorado two years ago and a half ago in the federal supreme court. An injunction is asked against Colorado irrigators to prevent the diversion of water from the Laramie river, which flows into the North Platte, into channels which would send it down the other side of the divide, emptying into the South Platte. The state of Colorado claims that under its constitution at the time it was admitted to the union in 1876 it had an absolute ownership and control of all water resources originating within its own borders, irrespective of priorities in other states. This is the vital point in the litigation. Should Colorado insist on that contention, Nebraska will join forces with Wyoming in urging the doctrine that priorities govern, but if Colorado will waive this part of the pleadings and have the case tried on its merits Nebraska will not intervene. The Wyoming-Colorado suit will be reached for argument in the supreme court at Washington next October and Mr. Reed plans to be there in time to present his plea for intervention. The last legislature appropriated $2,500 for the use of the state legal department in defending the rights of Nebraska water users. Before going to Denver the attorney general conducted a hearing at Scottsbluff on the complaint of water users in the North Platte valley, relative to accepting waters from the irrigation district there. Both the state and federal governments claim jurisdiction there and the federal government was represented at the hearing. Trusts to Talk to Veterans. Former United States Senator John M. Thurston and former Postmaster Joseph Crew of Omaha were state house callers today. They obtained from the State Highway commission an order for the benefit of a corporation in which they are interested. They left for Central City, where Mr. Thurston spent Wednesday at a district Grand Army of the Republic reunion.
