

DIRECTORS OF NEW HAVEN IN COURT

Jury Secured and Trial Wherein Conspiracy is Charged is Commenced in New York.

OPENING STATEMENT IS MADE

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—The jurors chosen to try William Rockefeller, Lewis Cass Leidy, Edward D. Robbins and eight other directors or former directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, charged with conspiracy to monopolize interstate commerce under the Sherman law, took their seats in the federal court today to hear the opening address of R. L. Batts, attorney for the government.

Mr. Batts planned to outline the case in chronological order, beginning in 1899, the date of the enactment of the Sherman law, and tracing the various transactions under which formerly independent railroads, trolley lines and steamship companies in New England were brought into the New Haven fold.

In his opening statement Mr. Batts asserted that the jury would be asked to consider the methods by which the alleged unlawful acts of the New Haven were done, as well as the acts themselves. He said he wanted to make it clear that there was no suggestion intended by the government that the component parts of the New Haven should be returned to their original status, as the combination of these parts was not necessarily unlawful.

The government and the law did not deprive and undertake to punish those natural growths and expansions which might be beneficial, he added, but New Haven was a combination which could have been brought together and given good service without bringing about a situation where "the people of this New England district are at the mercy of a powerful combination."

"The New Haven railroad," he continued, "which once owned only 63 miles of track, succeeded in acquiring all its competitors until it controlled 7,500 miles of line and gained a position where every person engaged in business in New England, every enterprise was under its power and control."

Steamship and trolley lines were similarly acquired, Mr. Batts asserted, and a complete monopoly of all transportation traffic attained, a monopoly that was unlawful and "designed to place an unlimited power in the hands of these conspirators."

Broke Up Through Rates.

The chief competitor of the New Haven, in the early days was the New York & New England railroad. In 1892 Mr. Batts charged the New Haven broke up a through route maintained by the New York & New England road, by gaining control of one of its connections to New York, the Housatonic.

How Charles S. Mellen, who is expected to be the government's star witness in the case, first came to go with the New Haven was a matter which the government attorney in reciting the history of the New Haven subsequent to its acquisition of New York & New England, Mr. Mellen was the general manager of the New York & New England and had threatened freight rate cuts against the New Haven.

There was at the time Mr. Mellen joined the New Haven a suit pending against the New England which, the government attorney said, had been started by a Boston saloon keeper named Goldsmith, at the instance of Austin Corbin, a former president of the New England, to restrain a proposed issue of securities by which the New England wanted to raise funds. The New Haven directors, Mr. Batts charged, acquired this suit and caused its prosecution by attorneys whose relationship to the New Haven was concealed.

The government would show, Mr. Batts said, that J. P. Morgan, William Rockefeller, C. P. Clark and Lucien Tuttle agreed to indemnify Austin Corbin for the consequences of their maintenance of the suit. The suit resulted, he asserted, in the New York and New England going into the hands of a receiver, when the New Haven purchased a controlling interest in the stock.

The heirs of Goldsmith subsequently brought suit for $25,000 against Corbin for damages "in the way of opprobrium and injury to name and business, which, the attorney charged, the New Haven settled."

"I do not believe that at the present time business men would do a thing of that kind," said Bates, "for times have changed, principally due to the Sherman act, I think. But at that time William Rockefeller did not hesitate to sign the bond of indemnification."

No Money, Not Buy Stock.

Mr. Batts went into the acquisition of the Boston & Maine. He told of the Massachusetts court decision which restrained the New Haven from holding Boston & Maine stock, "and the appearance on the scene" of John L. Hillard, who took over the Boston & Maine shares temporarily.

"That Hillard went to Charles S. Mellen's office and purchased the 10,848 shares of the Boston & Maine stock held by the New Haven, without putting up a cent of money of his own, was charged by the government attorney, Hillard was financed in the deal by the New Haven, he said, and kept the fact a secret while the New Haven was trying to get the authority of the Massachusetts legislature to authorize the creation of the Boston railroad holding company, authorizing the New Haven to own the Boston & Maine.

When this was done, the speaker said, Hillard, who was down on the books as buying the stock at 125, sold back to the New Haven at 150. The New Haven's own book value at the time was 215, so that the road lost $15 a share in the sale and $10 in the purchase.

"This meant," said the attorney, "that the New Haven for the use of the name of John L. Hillard for one year paid him $125,000."

Mr. Batts traced transactions, by which certain steamship properties were acquired through devious paths. He described the organization of the Pacific company and the Pacific Navigation company, through which, he alleged, the Yale and Harvard, two of the Metropolitan line's boats, running between New York and Boston, were sent to the Pacific coast.

Strikes Conference Resummed.

EL PASO, Tex., Oct. 18.—The conference between Arizona copper mine managers and a committee representing their striking employees was resumed today. It was expected that the question of reinstatement of the men was discussed on September 1 and September 11. Today the strike was called will occupy most of the day's deliberations.

Battle is Raging Along Front, With Serbians Holding Own

PARIS, Oct. 18.—The entire Serbian line on the Bulgarian front is being held against the invaders, notwithstanding the superiority of the Bulgarian forces, according to a dispatch to the Temps from Nish, under date of October 16. It is asserted that the Bulgarian army at Vlasina has been scattered.

"The battle continues along the whole front," says the dispatch. "Detachments of Serbians at Obrenovats on the Save river withdrew toward the southeast in the direction of Lasarevats to escape the fire of the enemy's heavy artillery."

"The Serbians continue to hold positions outside of Belgrade, dominating the city and valley of Tzevas."

"The Serbians evacuated Posaravac so as to avoid a turning movement of their adversaries."

German Report on the War. BERLIN, Oct. 18.—The text of the official statement issued today by German army headquarters staff follows:

"Western theater: The trench work northeast of Vermeles, which projects far into the enemy's positions was repeatedly attacked by the English with strong forces. All their attacks failed with heavy losses and the trench work remained in our hands."

"Attempts of the French to attack at Falais were subdued by our fire."

"A new enemy advance with the object of recapturing lost positions south of Leintrey was unsuccessful. It cost the French in addition to sanguinary losses three officers, seventeen noncommissioned officers and seventy-three chasseurs as prisoners."

"On Schratzmannel the enemy could not recapture a single foot of ground by its attacks, notwithstanding the use of a considerable quantity of ammunition."

"Yesterday German air squadrons attacked the fortress of Belfort, drove off the enemy aviators and dropped eight bombs on the fortress. A number of fires were observed to have been caused by the explosion."

"Eastern theater: Field Marshal von Hindenburg, in his attack south of Riga, made good progress. Two officers and 250 other prisoners remained in our hands."

"Russian attacks west of Jacobstadt were repulsed."

"West of Iloukret we captured enemy positions extending on a front of about three kilometers (1.8 miles)."

"Further south in the region of Morgan repeated Russian advances, undertaken with strong forces, were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy. Two officers and 175 men were taken prisoners."

"Army of Prince Leopold: A Russian attack on both sides of the Ljachovsch-Baranovitch railway broke down under our fire at a distance of 60 yards in front of our positions."

"Balkan theater: In the Macva district the enemy is beginning to retreat on the plateau land. South of Belgrade our troops are advancing against Ovetkov-Grob and the village of Vroin."

"Southeast of Posaravac the towns of Ornic and Rosevac have been captured."

"Bulgarian troops have occupied the heights of the Muslin-Predin and Madin Zub. Further south they are pushing forward by way of Egril Palanka."

"Army of General von Linnaing: On the River Rityr from Rafalovka to Killivokitch local engagements have developed."

GRACE SLATER TELLS STORY OF SMITH'S MURDER

the street. When he was a few feet from the curb he said, 'Hold up your hands.'

"Miss Slater believes she would be able to recognize the murderer's voice, and probably would be able to identify him."

"He had a heavy, square face," she said, "his voice and manner were gruff and harsh."

Chief of Police Dunn believes the murderer was the man who recently held up nine guests at the home of W. T. Hausa.

"Everything that could be of any possible assistance in finding him is being done," said the chief, "but we have little to work on. He has worked in widely separated parts of the city. He is a hard fellow to catch."

Miss Slater is of prepossessing appearance. She told her story in simple, straightforward manner. Although her hands shook with nervousness previous to the interview with the chief, she at no time lost the quiet composure which is a distinguishing characteristic of her manner.

Her large gray eyes met fairly the gaze of each person she talked with.

"Do you regret the publicity which has been given the fact that you were accompanied by a married man?" she was asked.

"Friends know the truth," she answered. "The others do not matter. The girls who were working for Mr. Smith were always accustomed to go to him for help or small favors. He was always willing to put himself out for anyone. It is nothing strange that he should take me to my home. On the way we were talking about the work at the office."

Miss Slater and her mother had been to the Hipp theater Saturday evening, she said. They met Mr. Smith, who had been at the Tabernacle.

Meets Smith.

"What are you doing down here at this time?" Smith asked her.

"I am going to take my mother home," she answered.

"Then I will take you home," replied Mr. Smith.

It was a rainy evening and Miss Slater had an umbrella. For that reason, she said, she had intended to accompany her mother to the latter's home. But her mother said she did not think an umbrella would be needed, according to the girl's story, and her mother went to buy a lost of goods after Mr. Smith and Miss Slater started for her home. Mr. Smith took the umbrella.

The relatives of W. H. Smith are: Mother, Mrs. L. A. Smith, 17 Canning street, Council Bluffs; three sisters, Mrs. G. E. Gruber, 3099 Avenue H, Council Bluffs; Mrs. E. H. Ingraham, Denver, Colo.; Mrs. Nora Hall, Council Bluffs; three brothers, J. T. Smith, Stuart, Neb.; A. B. Smith, Lincoln, Neb., and Chester Smith, at home with mother.

YATES HAS PRAISE FOR BOTH

Says Mr. Smith and Miss Slater Have Been a Good Example for Youth.

John T. Yates, sovereign clerk of the Workmen of the World, under whose supervision William H. Smith, cashier, murdered Saturday evening, and Miss Grace Slater, his companion, have been working for years, paid a high compliment to the characters of both.

"Mr. Smith was a boy when he came here and rose by a series of promotions," said Mr. Yates. "I trusted him. He was a man of fine character and one who was always quick to do a favor for another person."

"In consideration of the acquaintance which he had with Miss Slater and her friends and family, I do not consider it at all strange that he should accompany her to her home."

"Anyone who knows Miss Slater knows that she is a modest young woman and is entirely trustworthy. Her appearance indicates that fact."

Mr. Yates said no consideration had yet been given to the question whether a reward should be offered for the apprehension of the murderer of Mr. Smith.

CONDUCTOR TELLS HIS STORY

Says Miss Slater Not Much Ruffled Up When She Boarded the Car.

Frank Cushing, conductor on the Walnut Hill car on which Miss Grace Slater rode east last Saturday night, told the police what he knew about it. He said that the young woman boarded the car at Fourth street and that as far as he could see no one was around at the time. He said that she was not ruffled and that he did not notice anything strange in her actions at the time.

"Before we reached Thirty-third street," said Mr. Cushing, "the young woman came back to me and asked for a transfer. She said she had been held up and that she had but one nickel left. She then began to cry and burst into tears."

APPLE DAY APPEALS TO ALL NEBRASKANS

This Is the Day Set Apart to Buy and Eat the Most Luscious Fruit of State.

EXPERTS TELL OF VARIETIES

(From a Staff Correspondent.) LINCOLN, Oct. 18.—(Special.)—Apple day, October 19, will be celebrated by many thousands of people who have long been devotees of the apple and by other thousands who will commence to worship at the shrine of "King Apple."

Many varieties of apples will be introduced to the people. Some that are new in their prime, others that are common but to be good, others that will ready a couple of months later to be ready for use and still others that will not be at their best until next spring. A few hints on the seasons of some of the common varieties might not be amiss. The following is furnished by the state horticultural society:

Jonathan is First. Jonathan, the apple that attains perfection in the Missouri river loess soil, is an apple which heads the list as a dessert apple. Medium sized, bright red, skin shined, white meated apple, spicy, juicy, it is very desirable for dessert purposes. For decorating the table what is finer than a large cut glass bowl filled with high colored Jonathans. Not alone in the dessert class is it in the lead. Jonathan apple pie, Jonathan apple sauce, Jonathan apple cobbler and many other delicious Jonathan dishes must be eaten to be appreciated. The crop of Jonathan this year is large and the opportunity awaits every apple consumer to become acquainted with the Jonathan. Let the Jonathan start you in the apple eating habit. The season of the Jonathan is from October until they are gone.

Grimes Golden Also. Another apple that will be in great demand during the next three months is the Grimes Golden. A rich, beautiful golden, yellow, moderately juicy apple that is highly prized by those who know it as a leading dessert apple. For those who desire an apple that is not sweet, yet that is not as tart as the Jonathan, the Grimes Golden fills the bill. For baking the Grimes is par excellence.

An apple that has only in recent years appeared upon the market is the delicious, Deliculous both in name and taste, it is a dessert apple that is making friends each year. With its rich flavor, crisp fine texture, juicy flesh and red color, it makes an apple that is hard to surpass as a dessert apple. Its season is from October until January.

The Winesap Group. The Winesap group of apples is another class of apples that reach perfection in the Missouri river loess soil. The Winesap, Black Twig, Arkansas Black and Staygreen Winesap as a class are at their best from January on, depending upon the kind of storage and various. All apples ripen up sooner in common cellar or cave than they do in commercial cold storage. The Winesap having a tough smooth, bright red, deep to dark purplish red color on a green or yellow background, is a beautiful apple. It is one of the best for dessert and culinary purposes during its season. All the apples belonging to this class are good to eat out of hand, made intoauce, pies, dumplings or in other ways that may be desired. They are very juicy and make excellent cider both for drinking and for vinegar.

Rawls Genet is another old time apple that is a long keeper, excellent for eating late in the spring, and one of the best for cider making purposes.

How to Make Mouth Water. Baked apples with plenty of rich cream always tastes like more if the right kind of apples are used. The different sweet apples are excellent for baking. Most of the sweet apples in the market are at their best during the next two months. Many other varieties are excellent for baking if used during their season.

Apples of the Ben Davis class should not be used until late in the spring. This includes Ben Davis and Gano. These are large red or striped red apples which make a fine appearance when gathered and packed. This class of apples are best kept in the cellar until they have reached full color, then placed in storage and not used until next spring. At that season they are fine for pies, sauce, baking and in other recipes that the housewife desires to use. Late in the season they are good eaten out of hand. The Ben Davis is one of our best all around apples. Now, during the apple harvest, is the time to buy a box or barrel for next spring needs.

Many Other Varieties. Numerous other varieties will be found on the market at this time of year. Some are ready for present use and others must be put away until they can ripen up. Not judge a variety by the first bite you take out of the specimen you have. Perhaps you must put the variety away in the cellar for a few weeks or months before it will pass inspection. took place at Bois-en-Hache, to the northeast of Lihona, there has been almost continual fighting with trench weapons, while in the meantime our batteries directed an effective fire against the German works.

To the north of Verdun German forces have endeavored to occupy the craters of certain mines recently exploded between the lines. They have been repulsed everywhere.

Three new attacks on the part of the enemy against our positions at Bois-en-Hache, to the northeast of Souches, were completely checked last night by curtilains of fire, in which both artillery and infantry participated.

To the south of the river Somme, in the sector of Lihona, there has been almost continual fighting with trench weapons, while in the meantime our batteries directed an effective fire against the German works.

To the north of Verdun German forces have endeavored to occupy the craters of certain mines recently exploded between the lines. They have been repulsed everywhere.

Last night witnessed very spirited infantry fire between the trenches in the vicinity of Nomeny.

Prelude to General Attack. PARIS, Oct. 18.—The British blockade of the Bulgarian coast, says a dispatch to the Petit Journal from Athens, is a prelude to a combined land and sea operation along the Aegean coast of Bulgaria and Turkey. In these operations Italy will be represented by a naval squadron and a number of transports.

Serbian Are Retreating. BERLIN, Oct. 18.—The Serbian forces in the Macva district of the Save-Drina front in northwestern Serbia, where strong resistance has been offered to the Teutonic invaders, are now beginning to retreat. It was officially announced today by German army headquarters.

The Teutonic advance south of Belgrade continues, and progress also is being made in the Posaravac section. Additional successes also are reported for the Bulgarians on the eastern border of Serbia.

Serbs Offer Stubborn Resistance. AMSTERDAM, Oct. 18.—Telegraphing under date of October 18 the correspondent with General von Gallwitz army in Serbia of the Cologne Gazette says: "The Germans have to contend with severe battles against a stubborn and ceaselessly fighting enemy."

After referring to the progress already achieved by the Germans on Serbian soil he continues: "The difficult mountain country with its blizzards, rocky and steep slopes, fortifications, causes our troops enormous difficulties, which also are augmented by the fact that the Germans have to fight continually higher on rising ground. The Serbians facing them are in admirable defensive positions, which enable them to hold for a long time the defensive positions when attacked. Despite unfavorable mountain land and the extremely bad condition of the valley roads, the German troops have succeeded in progressing."
