OIL BURNERS MAY NOW BE HAD CHEAP

Price of Oil Goes Up and Now the Oil Burners Are Hanging on

OIL TANKS ARE CHEAP, TOO

Last fall it cost $100 to have an oil burner installed. The $100 paid was buried out in the back yard near the alley line, and also for the burner that was put into the furnace. The man who had the $100 and would not have an oil burner put in was looked upon as a cheap akate. The man who did have the necessary $100 and had a burner installed was the envy of his less fortunate and poorer neighbor.

Now there has been a square face about in the relative positions of the men who put in oil burners and those schuyler, for a long time on the freight who did not. The man who did not have the money to install a burner as contracting freight agent. His place and the one who had the money, but with the Missouri Pacific has been filled invested in coal instead of oil, as a rule, has the laugh upon the neighbor who put in and tried to heat his home by burning oil.

It is not known to an absolute certanty, but it is asserted that during September, October and November of last year, between 800 and 900 oil burners were installed in Omaha homes. There were so many of them that after the owners nenced to burn oil, the fumes from the burning fluid permeated the air in every part of the city. At one time there was talk of an ordinance against burning oil because of the objectionable odor that came from the chimneys. The peoand quickly put a quietus on the pro-Caught Packing Guns-John Lucia, posed plans. They were able to convince the city council that, like the odor from gasoline burned in automobiles, the edorfrom burning oil carried with it a certain degree of aristocratic standing and that no inteference would be brooked.

Crase Has Died Out. As it is now, there is no necessity of the passage of an ordinance of the kind talked of early in the fall. Now the majority of the men and women who were loudest in their advocacy of oil as a fuel for heating, have gone back to good old coal and all along the residence atreets of the city, oil burners are hanging out on the fence, or have tigation of the status of the franbeen sold to the junk man, to later be cast up into munitions of war for the fighting armies of Europe. On many hundreds of lots in the realdential sections of Omaha are great mounds. They have the appearance of being graves of giants, but they are not. In them are simply buried iron tanks, twelve feet in length and three feet in A. Fagenburg. Twenty-sixth and diameter. The market price of these tanks is $35 each, but there a whole lot of at the Brandels stores and walked away them that the owners would be willing with one valued at $30. In a large number of instances they failed to make good and since then then have been coming out of furnaces at a much more rapid rate than they were put in. A large number of instances have been reported of parties having oil burners that would heat the houses when the temperature outside was 30 to 60 degrees above, but when the temperature got down to 18 to 23 degrees below they simply quit and loafed on the jobs, leaving the occupants of the homes in the cold, or clustered about the kitchen range.

Price of Oil Advances. It is asserted that a number of the burners that have been taken out have been removed on account of the price of ell having advanced. In the early fall the people who put in burners contracted with the oil companies for their supply of oil at 4% cents per gallon. Subsequently oil was advanced a cen and then another cent, and those who Paying War Taxes the high price. One contention is that the majority of those having their burners removed were those who were forced to pay the top price for oil. However, even at the 4% cents per gallon contract price, oil has proved an expensive fuel, for those who burned it. Even when the weather was not cold, the oil bills for each twenty-four hours were about $1.50 and when the weather the burner, the daily fuel bill jumped up

At any rate, there are a lot of oil burners and oil tanks about the city that can be bought cheap. Corporation Counsel Lambert Says Two Territorial Grants Will Expire Next Year.

MAKE AN INVESTIGATION

Corporation Counsel Lambert has to proceed with an exhaustive inveschises under which the Omaha & Council Bluffs Street Railway company is operating.

A cursory examination of the records leads Mr. Lambert to believe that the territorial grant given to the Omaha Horse Car company in 1867 will expire January 1 of next year, and another grant to the Omaha Motor company will have expired on July 2 of next year. He told the council committee of the whole that he believes the grant to the Omaha Cable and Tramway company will expire in 1928. In view of what he Some of the olld burners have worked to believes to be two expirations franchises next year, he suggested the commissioners the advisability of going into the matter thoroughly at this

Mr. Lambert anticipates the contention

The gist of the situation as presented by the corporation counsel to the comssioners was: "In 1867 a territoria grant was given to the Omaha alorse Car company, this purporting to be ar exclusive right for fifty years, with the stipulation that at the expiration of the franchise all tracks, depots and equipment should revere to the city. In 1888 a forty-year grant was given to the cable company. The legislature passed an act permitting the consolidation of the separate companies. The Omaha Street Railway company took over the horse car and cable companies. In its consolidation act the legislature speci-fied that nothing in the act should impair or effect any existing right of reversion held by the city." It is understood that Mr. Lambert will submit to the council a full report in writing as soon as he shall have inestigated all phases of the situation.

CITY CONSIDERS SPITTING MENACE

Matter Referred to J. A. Rine and Welfare Board is to Take Up the Question.

WOMEN ADDRESS THE COUNCIL

The city commissioners took cognizance of the spitting situation in Omaha, as presented by Mesdames James Richardson, by referring the matter to J. A. Rine, member of the welfare board and also city attorney. The matter was recognized as of sufficient importance to warrant cooperation by the city officials. The suggestions presented by the women to the city council will be given attention at the next meeting of the Welfare board.

In her witty remarks to the council Mrs. Sumney said she believed it would require the services of the police and fire department to abate the nuisance and then the task would not be completed She wished to disabuse the thought that this movement was being backed by the and charged him at the police station suffragettes or any particular organization. Business and Taxes Go Hand in Hand

The more business the Omaha Manufacturers do, the more taxes they must pay. Taxes are used for the benefit of the city in general and each citizen receives his proportion.

It is beneficial, then, to each one of us who live in this city that the Omaha manufacturers are able to say that their business is increasing and that times are prosperous with them.

In addition to helping pay for new schools, paving and other public improvements, the Omaha Manufacturers employ thousands of our laborers and furnish a quick and profitable market for the raw products of this territory. Without these factories, the business of each one of us would suffer.

Money spent for Omaha-Made Goods, therefore, is a direct contribution by each citizen to the city and to himself.

The loyal Omahan, who buys Omaha-Made Goods, helps make Omaha a bigger and a better place in which to live, rather than sending his money to Chicago, Cleveland, New York or some other far-away city to the detriment of his home town.

And then, because it costs less to sell Omaha-Made Goods in Omaha, where it is not necessary to pay freight rates, Omaha-Made Goods of the same quality sell for less money than goods shipped in-and goods of better quality for the same money.

Is there, really now, any argument in support of buying goods made elsewhere? Help yourself by always talking, using and serving Omaha-Made Goods.
