He Inquires to Know. It was not three minutes after Mossman had recited the history of the burning of Washington by the British, that I. J. Dunn stood up with his shoulders thrown back and declared, that in the 35 years that we have been a nation we have never been invaded or attacked. Mr. Dunn wanted to know, if preparedness was worth while, and if we have nothing worth while now, what has been becoming of the millions we have spent for so many years for battleships and army?

YOUNG MAN FACES DEATH AS THE RESULT OF BLOW

Frank Sullivan, the 19-year-old soda dispenser at Piel's drug store, Eighteenth and Farming streets, is dying at Wise Memorial hospital from the effects of a blow from an ice pick in the hands of Willie Lawson, 17-year-old negro messenger boy, with whom he had an altercation.

Lawson is in jail, and physicians say Sullivan has slight chance for life.

According to other employees of the store, the negro lad started the affray by flipping a wet towel in the white boy's face. A fight started and the negro used the pick. The instrument cut through the scalp and penetrated the skull to within an eighth of an inch of the brain.

JACKSONIANS IN REGULAR DEBATE

Speakers Pro and Con Tell Why We Should or Shouldn't Have More Preparedness.

WHOLE SUBJECT LAID BARE

Nobody remembers when the members of the Jacksonian club began to debate the subject of preparedness, but everyone knows they are still at it.

Anyone who doubts this might have had that doubt blown out of him by the explosion of oratory on the Sixteenth floor of the City National bank building last night.

H. L. Mossman, pale, youthful, and as full of philosophy as Hamlet himself, stood like a gladiator in the arena and defended the president's preparedness program, against the full-cheated verbal thunder of Ray Abbott and I. J. Dunn. Tom Murray assisted young Mossman, and together the two worked like a well trained team on a whiplistree.

How Long We Would Last. Mossman had one big chart showing exactly, in actual figures, what army and navy we have now and what the president proposed, seeking to show that the recommendation is by no means excessive. Murray followed with a skillfully drawn map showing, what he says is recorded in every war office of the world, as "The Vital Area of the United States." He showed to his own satisfaction and the satisfaction of his friends and supporters how an army of 10,000 men could come in and in a few weeks take all of the area of the United States that is worth anything from the standpoint of munition factories, steel plants and cotton mills.

Ray Abbott held that the question can no longer be debated on its own merits since "The personality of two men has entered into it to such an extent that we have lost sight of the fundamentals in the question of preparedness. He declared also, that he had been a soldier of the Philippine war, and therefore could not be accused of being an extreme pacifist. Answering the charge made by Mossman that soldiers died like flies in the Philippine and Cuban troubles because the men were green and did not know how to take care of themselves, Mr. Abbott said: "I know something about that. In San Francisco, before we started for the Philippines, we lost some men in camp, yes—but every man we lost from disease, we lost because the commander, who was a regular army man, drilled and prepared in the knowledge of camp life, had no better sense than to camp us on an old city dump. And I tell you he was a regular army officer, schooled, educated, and prepared."

STYLE SHOW AT GAYETY

"This is the Life" by Merry Rounders Presents Gorgeous Exhibition.

SEVERAL THEATER PARTIES

This is style show week at the Gayety. Every one of the ten scenes in the "Merry Rounders" uproarious revue, "This is the Life," presents a gorgeous exhibition of rich and brilliant costumes of the new and different sort. All the women in the big audience at the first performance last evening were in raptures over the gowns, and the men were not far behind in their appreciation of the beauties of costume on the pretty and sharply girls. Furthermore, the burlesque itself is a mighty and swinging entertainment, full of laughs and song hits. Altogether, it's the kind of a show that sends the crowd home laughing and singing and mighty glad they went to see it.

Abbe Reynolds heads the funmakers with his well known character part, only it is all new and funnier and more zestful than ever. George F. Hayes plays the second comic ably, his role being of the laughable rube constable order, which he makes a regular scream. Jack McGowan, popular last season, has a peevish voice and sparkling personality, and "puts over" much entertainment to rousing big hands. His sister, Ursa McGowan, is the ingenue of the company and sings several winning numbers.

Leading Woman Captivates. May Latham, a recent convert from musical comedy, is leading woman and with her charming good looks, dainty ways and delightful voice, speedily captivates the audience. Zella Clayton wins numerous encores at each appearance and helps display the elaborate wardrobe to good advantage. Violet Hall and Ralph Watson of the chorus, also have popular solo parts. A strong male octet is one of the features of the musical program, which is excellent throughout. Leonard Manning and Bob Moore go the limit of speed in their dance specialty. The staging of chorus ensemble numbers is notable, and many novelties are introduced in the costuming, scenery and funmaking. Manager Johnson has booked the Auto Girls for auto show week.

On Saturday afternoon the entire local agency force of the Prudential Life gave a theater party at the Gayety in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary, with the company of I. E. Frederick and also the settlement of a wage made between the new men and the old men for the amount of new business secured in three weeks. The first week the new men won a lunch at the expense of the old men. The second week the old men got revenge in the same manner, but on the home stretch the pep which the new men had and the old men lacked turned the tide again and after taking a vote as to the best way of making the old men settle the bet, luncheon having become stale, the new men unanimously decided a theater party at the Gayety the best substitute.

NAME WITHHELD FOR PRESENT

Mrs. G. W. Doane, secretary of the Associated Charities, would like to give the name of the young woman with whom she rode in an automobile from the Fort Omaha district to the business center of the city yesterday morning, but she believes the best interests of this person will be served at this time by not revealing her identity. It was the first time she had been down town in two years. Mrs. Doane accompanied the convalescent and was interested in noting the girlish enthusiasm with which she beheld sights denied her for a long time. The young woman has been cared for by the Associated Charities and shoes supplied, ninety-six; meals provided, ninety-four; lodgings, sixty-four; medical aid, ten; legal aid, three; transcripts cared for, 124.

During last week Secretary Doane had the experience of meeting a family in real need, but not inclined to accept charity. The case relates to an elderly man and his wife who were reported by neighbors. Mrs. Doane went to investigate, but the couple would not listen to the suggestion of charitable assistance. Efforts are being made to induce them to throw false pride aside and accept the comforts offered.

Washington Affairs

The annual rivers and harbors appropriation bill, completed in committee, except for final decision on the appropriation sought for the East river channel in New York harbor, carries a total of $10,000,000, of which the largest item is $4,700,000 for the Mississippi river. The bill is confined to completion of existing projects, in line with the administration policy. It will be reported to the house probably Wednesday.

Debate on the postoffice bill in the house was diverted for two hours into a rambling preparedness discussion during which Representative Mondell, republican of Wyoming, attacked Representative Quinn of Mississippi, a democratic member of the military committee and a former anti-preparedness advocate, for his recent change of attitude. Mr. Mondell declared President Wilson's preparedness arguments lacked facts to back them and said the president had "slightly" tried to put a scare into timid folks. Mr. Quinn vigorously defended the president.

The annual rivers and harbors appropriation bill, completed in committee, except for final decision on the appropriation sought for the East river channel in New York harbor, carries a total of $10,000,000, of which the largest item is $4,700,000 for the Mississippi river. The bill is confined to completion of existing projects, in line with the administration policy. It will be reported to the house probably Wednesday.

Debate on the postoffice bill in the house was diverted for two hours into a rambling preparedness discussion during which Representative Mondell, republican of Wyoming, attacked Representative Quinn of Mississippi, a democratic member of the military committee and a former anti-preparedness advocate, for his recent change of attitude. Mr. Mondell declared President Wilson's preparedness arguments lacked facts to back them and said the president had "slightly" tried to put a scare into timid folks. Mr. Quinn vigorously defended the president.
