MRS. JEROME MAGEE SUING FOR DIVORCE

Mixed Affairs of This Couple Finally Land in Divorce Courts for Settlement.

CRUELTY IS MAIN CHARGE

The filing of a divorce petition by Mrs. Ella Cotton-Magee against Jerome Pratt Magee, alleging cruelty, furnishes a tragic climax to a brilliant society wedding in 1907 and is a distinct shock to Omaha's exclusive set. It is understood, however, among intimate acquaintances of the family, that divorce proceedings have been held off for some time through the influence of Mrs. Magee's mother.

In her petition the wife charges that on various occasions her husband's cruelty was of a punitive nature, several alleged inflictions having occurred at the Country club.

Mr. Magee is known as one of Omaha' wealthy clubmen and society figures. He is a grandson of the late Colonel Pratt and was appointed administrator of the Pratt estate. In connection with his administration of this estate he was sued by his brother and wather for their shares. He made a trip to Sweden ostensibly as administrator to settle with settlement and then claimed the inheritance of the heir living in Sweden. Wants Custody of Son.

Mrs. Magee is the daughter of Mr. Cotton and Mrs. Cotton, now Mrs. Herman Kountze. The daughter married Fred Nash, 23, and shortly after the death of Mr. Nash she was wedded to Magee on February 27, 1907. In her petition Mrs. Lagee asks for custody of her son Marshall; also sufficient funds to maintain herself and child in a comfortable manner.

The Magee nuptials in 1907 were regarded as one of the most brilliant functions of that season. The marriage was referred to as the culmination of "the most beautiful love-match."

Friends of both the Magees declare they have quarreled on various recent
