BIG ORANGE DAY CELEBRATED HERE

California Urges Nation to Join in Promoting Its Principal Industry.

EAT ORANGES FOR YOUR HEALTH

Today is the day set for California's great Orange day celebration. The whole country is urged and invited to help make its observance a great success. People living outside of California can join in the work of promoting a great industry by getting some oranges today—eat some themselves and give the rest to their families and friends.

Orange growing is now a great California industry—the most important in that state and one of the greatest in the world.

At the time when apples stored for the winter are becoming dried and worthless—when there are no berries, grapes, peaches or pears save those in the windows of the expensive fruiterers or the green houses of the wealthy, the oranges are in golden piles on the fruit stands and within reach of everybody.

Aid to Digestion.
In them is the acid necessary to keep the digestion in perfect condition. They are suited to the most delicate invalid. They are good before breakfast, at lunch, at dinner—between meals.

Children can eat oranges until they can eat no more without injurious effect. Even nursing babies can sip the juice when most foods are too strong for their tiny stomachs. Everybody can eat oranges, and if everybody would eat them there would be less work for the doctors.

Missionaries Brought Trees.
It was in California that nature was taught to grow oranges without seeds, oranges with thin skins and plump, delicious sections filled with health-giving juice.

The few trees that the old missionaries planted have had a countless multitude of descendants, and other trees have been brought from all parts of the world where oranges flourish best.

Besides the orange orchards are groves of lemons and figs, and very recently the date has been imported from Arabia and made to contribute its share toward feeding the nation.

You will help a great state observe a real holiday, and you will acquire a habit that will prove of enduring benefit.

Price of Raw Sugar Continues to Climb

NEW YORK, March 16.—The continued strong tone of the raw sugar market today sent the price of granulated sugar to the highest level recorded since the outbreak of the European war. One of the largest American refiners quoted the granulated product at 7 cents while others advanced the price to 6.90 cents. The high price was attributed to the recent active demand for sugar from abroad, owing to the small European acreage of beet sugar and large domestic buying.
