SEE OMAHA GREAT MART OF WORLD

Leaders in Industry of Fine Beef Production Gather Here from All Over the West.

CATTLE PRICES TO STAY HIGH

Omaha will soon be the leading cattle market of the United States, which means the world, some of the recognized greatest live stock authorities of the middle west told their hearers at a Shorthorn cattle men's banquet last night at the Castle hotel.

The banquet took the form of one of the most notable gatherings of live stock men and others actively identified and connected with the middle west's greatest industry that has ever been held in Omaha. The after dinner speakers included men who have won distinction in the middle west and northwest as undiplomatic authorities on practically every phase of the live stock industry but particularly on Shorthorn cattle.

Shorthorn's Day at Hand.

The banquet, which was attended by over 500 guests, including many from out-of-town, lasted from 4:30 o'clock till nearly midnight—and contrary to precedent the last after-dinner speaker on the program was listened to with a rapt attention as the first.

The brightest period in the history of Shorthorn breeders' operations is now at hand, Martin T. White, field man for the Iowa Homestead, who presided as toastmaster, declared in an opening address before the program of speakers started.

Mayor James C. Dahman in his address of welcome, remarked that the greater part of his life was spent in the cattle business and for this reason he was doubly glad to extend to the visitors the "keys to the city."

The most important part of the Shorthorn cattle have played in the rebuilding of Omaha, and the ranking of the South Side yards as the second greatest live stock market in the country was brought out by Frank D. Tomson of Lincoln, editor of Shorthorn in America, and a member of the Tomson Brothers concern at Dover, Kan., one of the biggest cattle operators in the United States.

Cattle a Necessity.

Mr. Tomson, who is considered to be a Shorthorn authority of national reputation, said that if stockmen would adopt the slogan, "A Pure Bred Bred On Every Farm in Nebraska," it would not be long before Omaha forged ahead as the paramount cattle market of the country.

In Mr. Tomson's opinion the present Shorthorn prices are high enough. He exhorted Mayor Dahman for his loyalty to anything that makes for the betterment of any phase of the live stock industry.

Dean E. A. Burnett of the Nebraska School of Agriculture, speaking on the subject, "Tomorrow's Shorthorn Men," asserted that it is impossible successfully to develop agricultural interests without cattle. He declared that it was a much greater problem to breed cattle than to raise corn to feed hogs.

That the successful breeder must love his work and be a business man in every sense of the word was the contention of Dean Burnett. Nebraska is the state that presents the greatest opportunity for Shorthorn breeding, he asserted.

H. H. Smith of Ft. Reed, chief of the veterinary department of the Hill roads and former head of the animal husbandry department at the State university at Lincoln, conceded the fact that the middle west is way ahead of the northwest in cattle raising.

Best Time for Farmers. He told the Shorthorn men that the farmers and stockmen of the northwest at the present time are not being encouraged to go into the breeding business. But, he said, the farmers are being urged to raise more live stock, as the steady growth of grain in that section of the country has resulted in a depletion of the soil.

In Mr. Smith's estimation there never was a better time than now for farmers to engage in the live stock business. He predicted good prices for cattle for years to come. He told of the great condition James J. Hill has in the live stock business, and he said that the great railroad magnate was such a devotee of the raising of pure-bred cattle that he knows every cow in his stable by name.

Situation in Europe. The cattle situation in Europe was commented on by Mr. Smith. One of the reasons for the great drain on the cattle supply in the belligerent countries, he explained, is the fact that one man under arms eats three times as much each day as the average man in this country. The world is going to see high prices for cattle for many more years, he said.

C. A. Saunders of Manila, Ia., a member of the Animal Health commission of Iowa and one of the most prominent figures in the breeding world in the highway state, spoke on the wonderful possibilities of the Shorthorn cattle business.

Advertising Page. Advertising was the subject of an interesting talk by Emerson E. Smith of Lincoln, president of the Lincoln club. That live stock men are among the most talented advertisers, was a statement of Mr. Smith.

Five Children Made Fatherless by the Insatiable Jealousy of Oliver Morrell

LITTLE TODD IN CART ARE CHILDREN OF MR. AND MRS. OLIVER MORRELL. UPPER INSERT PHOTO IS MRS. MORRELL, WHILE THE LOWER CUT IS MR. MORRELL.

Oliver had planned to kill my sister and himself for weeks," asserted Mrs. C. A. Carter, 4415 North Twenty-third street, sister of Mrs. Oliver Morrell, who was shot and seriously wounded by her husband at his home, 2224 North Twenty-fourth street, Friday. Morrell was arrested by Police Officer William Good for beating and abusing his wife. While waiting for the patrol in a drug store at Twenty-fourth and Binney, Morrell suddenly drew a revolver which he had concealed in his sleeve, shot and killed the policeman, returned home, and after shooting his wife three times, turned the weapon on himself and ended his life with a bullet behind the right ear.

According to Mrs. Carter, Morrell had been drinking heavily off and on, ever since his retirement on a pension from the Omaha fire department. Two weeks ago he came to the Carter home in search of his wife, who was attending a lodge meeting. At that time he was under the influence of drink and was armed with two revolvers. "It will all be over soon," he said to his brother-in-law, and significantly patted the pocket containing one of the guns. On various occasions he had threatened his wife's life, and only Friday morning had beaten her severely before going to work. An unwarranted jealousy of his wife and own habits are attributed as the cause of the tragedy.

After shooting Good, he went home and secured his wife's revolver with which he shot her and himself. Both guns were lying at his side when the police arrived. His children, Ruth, 7, Fern, 3, and Joe, 2, have been staying with the family of C. W. McCune since the shooting, but were later taken to the Carter home. Funeral services will be held for Oliver Good Monday morning from the residence, 2216 Spaulding street. Interment will be in Forest Lawn cemetery. His wife and two children, Helen, aged 17, and William, Jr., 12, are unable to speak of his death. He was 39 years old and for over fourteen years has been a member of the police department. Morrell was a member of the city fire department for twenty-one years and for a time was captain of the station at
