MORE speculations as to what is doing the long days of this quiet Lent are still in order. First, it had been announced that it was reading; later we heard it was sewing—and now comes the additional news—it is corrective gymnastics.

With the new spring styles, graceful ankles and trim waists are requisite. In the short skirts the past winter, any woman with a good pair of laces and a fairly strong grip could make a presentable appearance of herself in the high boots so in vogue.

But spring draws on—and smart pumps will be worn. Think of the pudgy ankles in light gauze stockings under short skirts of "sport" fabric and colors.

Some one long since has asked what Venus would be suddenly stricken blind. That is nothing to Venus in pumps, light hose—and beefy ankles!

Some less favored ones are said to be working hard these days of penitence with those pudgy ankles. They are standing with heels together and toes out and going through a perfect system of pivoting and gyrating. It is further said that the exercise will make a more graceful dancer and a surer skater for the coming season. All the old standbys to draw in the waist are back again, with the "hip reducing" floor rolling quite abandoned—hoops may be in—so why waste time and energy?

The week just passed was one of the busiest of the season. The Fling lectures were successfully launched and the exhibit of the northwestern artist opened to a public that is really responding and viewing the paintings of the painters of their own section of the country.

It quite goes without saying, whether in Lent, or out of Lent, when the members of the committees of the Omaha Fine Arts society are busy advancing the work and interests for which their society was organized, there will naturally be a most perceptible falling off in social affairs. A matron, no matter how popular a hostess or guest, who stands on her feet half the hours out of the twenty-four, is not accepting invitations nor writing them in any great number.

"The spirit is willing, but the feet are weak," said a very much desired dinner guest the other evening when declining to "make up" a place at a table.

But serious and intellectual as may be the bent of the parents this Lent, the children, who some dozen years hence may make up the social life of Omaha, had one of the merriest frolics in all their existence last Wednesday afternoon at Chamber's academy when Miss Mary Coll's dancing class gave a masquerade. There were charity chaplains, of course, and the seasons, the months, Dutch boys, Dutch dolls, pirates, fatras and personifications of whims and styles and fancies of the latest moment. There are pictures galore taken of the masquers, in groups and couples—and interesting bits of reminders they will be some day!

There are some very good and well meaning people on this earth who disapprove in no compromising way of cards—they will hold that nothing good ever came of them, yet.

PROXIMITY to the University of Nebraska furnishes Omaha study circles with popular lecturers from that institution. Prof. F. M. Fling, who is giving a series on the European war situation, under the auspices of the Equal Franchise society, and Prof. Paul H. Grossmann, who has just completed a course in Ibsen for the Drama league, are perhaps best known to Omaha audiences.

Dr. Sturges Jones, who gives the closing lectures in the Drama league course, beginning Monday, bids fair to rival his other colleagues in arousing the interest of his listeners. Prof. Jones has taken "English Drama of Today" as his subject, and will discuss the English sociological drama tomorrow, and the English literary drama, next Monday. The speaker was educated at Oxford and is an authority on English history. He has spent practically every summer in England working on old documents in the "Record Office."

New interest in the Social Settlement is awakened by the advent of two fresh leaders, the recently elected president, Mrs. J. W. Hobbs and the new head resident, Miss Beulah Byrd. Both women will discuss plans for the coming year with the social science department of the Omaha Woman's club Monday afternoon, the department having set aside this whole afternoon for discussion of topics of interest to the settlement.

A harbinger of the end of the club season is the first word of elections to come, the oratory current topics departments on Tuesday of this week, and the election of officers for the club proper, a week from Monday. The nominating committee is already considering probable candidates.

Friday is a big day for local Campfire girls, one of their national leaders, Miss Edith M. Kempthorne, is coming from the headquarters in New York City that day to visit the Omaha groups. Friday morning, Miss Kempthorne will have a council with the auxiliaries of the local groups, and in the afternoon, the girls will meet her at the Young Women's Christian association. There will be a big public meeting in the "Y" auditorium that evening, when Miss Kempthorne will tell all about the Campfire Girls' movement, showing movies of the girls in their camp activities. A group of girls from the local camps will demonstrate, in costumes, the ceremonial work of the organization.

Guardians for the local camps are Misses Helen Buck, Nellie Ryan, Glenn Klesper, Olive Basin, Emma Ellsworth, Eleanor Stallard, Bertha Vaughan, Helen Garvin and Leticia Holdrege.
