Only Students Are to Be Admitted to High School Show. On account of an order issued by the school board recently forbidding anyone except duly enrolled students of the high school to attend high school entertainments, only one performance of the high school vaudeville show will be given. This performance will be given Friday evening this week. So much interest has been manifested by outsiders, however, that another performance probably will be given next week, by which time the ban probably will be lifted. The forbidding of outsiders was due to the action of the health department to stamp out the scarlet fever epidemic. The full show will be given on Friday night, including the two acts that Coach Holligan has been so successful in arousing in mystery. The following cadets have been chosen to compete in the spell-down that will be the first number on the program: Corporal Daniel Longwell, Company A; Corporal Leland Potter, Company B; Sergeant Russell Sage, Company C; Corporal Nathan Miller, Company D; Corporal Harold Lindley, Company E; Sergeant Warren Ege, Company F; Corporal Johnson, Company G; Clyde Jensen, Company H; Sergeant Dell Rowser, Company I; Captain and Aid Michael Goldsmith will be in charge of the spell-down. LIFE OF FORMER COUNTESS SAD ONE Mrs. Howard's Tragic Death Ends Career of "Disappointed Womanhood," Says Friend. SHOWED TALENT AS AN ARTIST CHICAGO, April 11.—(Special Telegram.)—"Joe" Howard and his matrimonial adventures have long been a picturesque item in theatrical affairs of the middle west. Howard came originally from Lawrence, Kan., as a newsboy and bootblack. He drifted to Denver where somebody found he had a good voice and started him singing in saloons and cafes. Presently he branched out and found himself in demand for stag parties and club entertainments. At one of the latter he met "Diamond Dolly" Emerson, at one time reigning favorite in Denver and Leadville and her daughter, Ida, a vivid brunette. The mother had retained her good looks and the two were appearing on the stage as the "Emerson Sisters." The Two Elope. Joe and Ida eloped. Soon afterward a writer of popular songs interested himself in Howard and his wife and the two began appearing in burlesque. For several years they were features of the entertainments at Sam T. Jacks theater in Madison street. Then Howard got a theatrical engagement or two apart from his wife. One of them was in a vaudeville sketch with Mabel Harrison, who had been a Chicago favorite for several years, playing chiefly "little girl" parts. Mrs. Howard began talking of divorce proceedings and wrote a number of stinging letters to Miss Harrison, who was herself a divorcee, having had a disastrous matrimonial experience with William Gaston, a vaudeville actor. Goes His Profitable Way. The Howard divorce proceedings came as scheduled. Ida Emerson remained a "Burlesque Queen" and Howard went his way, which for a time was highly profitable. He had become a composer and a popular one. He would think out his tunes, spell them out with one finger on a piano keyboard, and then get a man who knew something of harmony to work them out in detail. He became a presiding genius of the La Salle theater, writing the music for a series of musical comedies, which ran continuously from 1906 to 1908, giving the little play house a national reputation and making Howard a rich man. Mrs. Howard lived the life of "Disappointed Womanhood," according to the estimate of close friends. "She had the soul of an artist," said this young woman whose name is withheld in the streets of the moment. "Her childhood and her girlhood had been that of an artist. She was admired by a father and mother who were indulgent and generous to a fault. When her first yearnings began to develop into a positive cry for expression it was toward painting that she pressed. She meets the Count. "I do not believe she ever swerved from the sensitive gentle characteristics that kept her at her colors and her seeking after the truth as artists see it, until she met Count Mourik de Beaufort in London. That was the beginning of the end. Until then she had lived the life of a child. Her life had been a clean one, outside influences as a baby. But De Beaufort seemed to possess some strange fascination for her. Perhaps he was the first man that she ever noticed or come into her life. De Beaufort was persistent. He waved aside all the objections she could set in his way. It was a strange thing for her to meet with resistance. Her whole life had been one of gentle indulgence. "Well, they were married. The world knows the rest." NEWS AGENT'S EFFORT TO END LIFE FAILURE Farnam Djureen, a news agent on passenger trains running out of Omaha, attempted suicide by taking bicloride of mercury at the home of his former wife, Mrs. Beattie Djureen, at 148 Chicago street, at a late hour yesterday evening as the result of a quarrel. Police Surgeon Kulakofsky was called and revived the man, who will recover.

Alleges Wife Told Others Hubby Didn't Have Enough Speed That Beattie Mary Ann Matzen, who is named defendant in a suit for divorce filed with the clerk of the district court, told her husband, in the presence of others, that "he was not enough of a sport and wouldn't take her to cheap dives and get drunk like other men," are some of the charges made in the petition by John Matzen, the husband and plaintiff. The Matzens were married in Omaha in November, 1908. After the marriage, the petition charges his wife declared, in the presence of a third party, that she did not love him, but simply married him in "have a place to go." The petition also charges cruelty and states that the defendant swore and used rough language on numerous occasions. Have Good Health Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the Old Reliable Spring Tonic.
