CHAPTER XIV. (Continued from Yesterday.) "Was it one of a pair of reinforcers?" "No, sir. It was one he had fixed especially in 1875. All right." "Was it one of Mr. Pollock's telegrams to anyone before or after dinner, that you knew of?" "Yes, sir. He went down to the phone booth when he came in, and talked a long time. He seemed very angry, and suddenly he shouted, 'Thank you, you'll do as I say or die.' I'll send you up. I've got the goods on you." "Then he returned to realize that something might have happened to his wife. There was another call for him while he was talking and he went out, and answered it. He seemed angry at first, then pleased. It was in a much better temper when he came back." "The witness wiped his brow, and glanced at the apartment, as if looking for the sympathetic face of his wife. In his excitement, and because the seat cushions had got up, he did not have a chance to see her. "Whatson, 103 1/2 235 Mrs. P.

STORY OF QUARREL OVER SUBSEA WAR Gets the Republican Preferential Vote In This State for President

Complications Begin Moment Germany Declares War Zone Around British Isles.

SERIES CRITICAL SITUATIONS

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Complications between the United States and Germany began piling up from the moment the submarine war zone was declared around the British Isles. With all Europe afire in war, the eyes of the world were turned upon the United States in expectancy of developments that would threaten to draw the greatest neutral into the conference. They were not long in coming.

With the torpedoing of the British liner Falaba, the first American life was lost. Then in quick succession came the attacks on the Gulfstream and the Cushing, American ships. The sinking of the American sailing ship William P. Feyer raised another issue, but involved different questions and, while it complicated the situation, could not assume the threatening features of the cases where Americans traveling on passenger ships and having no part or interest in the conduct of the war were sent to their deaths without warning.

Then came the sinking of the Lusitania—almost a year ago—in which 115 Americans, many of them women and children, were lost in a submarine attack which subsequent events proved was known in advance to the German embassy in this country and which was guardedly advertised in the daily papers in the form of a warning to Americans to keep off belligerent ships traversing the war zone.

It seemed then as if the breaking point had come and all eyes were turned on President Wilson. That night the president after shutting himself in his study, slipped out of the White House, studied the secret service guard, walked for blocks around silent, unfrequented streets of the capital in the attitude of a man confronted with making a great decision. The first note to Germany pledging the United States to lend it strict accountability followed soon afterwards.

Then another national sensation, due solely to the Lusitania negotiations, followed. Secretary Bryan resigned because he could not agree with the president's policy, which he believed would lead to war.

While the Lusitania negotiations were proceeding the Arabic was sunk, with the death of more Americans, and it seemed then the breaking point could not be averted.

Germany Gives Pledges. The German government then gave its assurances not to torpedo more "liners" and Count von Bernstorff informed Secretary Lansing that the German emperor's orders to the submarine commanders to destroy such a nature as to admit of no misunderstanding. Indemnity for American lives lost on the Lusitania was offered and while long negotiations over the form in which Germany should admit the illegality of its act were in progress Austria was brought into the situation, first by the destruction of the Ancona and later by the destruction of the Fera, although in the latter case responsibility never definitely was fixed.

Austria finally gave satisfaction in the Ancona case and while the Lusitania negotiations seemed to be nearing a final settlement, Germany announced its new submarine campaign which began on March 1, with the avowed purpose of sinking without warning any merchant ships of its enemies which carried armament. This raised a new feature to the issue which never has been settled and since the submarine campaign began scores of peaceful ships, many of them carrying Americans, have been destroyed. The sunken channel steamer Sussex and the endangering of about fifty Americans. Since the Sussex was attacked State department records show that more than sixty-five ships have been destroyed.

HENRY FORD.

It is a blockade of the European neutrals which it suspected of being gateways to Germany. President Wilson steadfastly refused to permit the two situations to become connected, holding that the negotiations of the United States with one belligerent could in no way be made dependent upon its relations with another.

Upon the accumulation of evidence President Wilson and the cabinet have come to the conclusion that there is abundant evidence that Germany is violating its promises and that the president is prepared to outline his action to Congress tomorrow. The next step will be disclosed only by the president himself when he speaks.

BELIEVES DIAMOND BEDS ARE BURIED UNDER SEA

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.) JOHANNESBURG, March 27.—An interesting theory of Dr. Wagner, government geologist, as to the presence of diamonds in German Southwest Africa, now in British possession, is that since the area terminated fifteen miles from the coast deposits are buried beneath the ocean.

The Cape Hanger.

Two wayfarers were resting by the roadside. "This is a tough life we're leading," mused one of them, "ridin' 'em trucks at the risk of our lives, gettin' chased by brackens and cats' dogs, sleepin' in barns and haystacks, an' eatin' the leftovers from other folks' meals. Honest, I'd after the theater—where?"

"I had been to the show, sir, and was coming out when I saw Mr. Pollock just ahead of me. I thought he was looking for his limousine. I saw it and hurried up, intending to tell him where it was, when he caught sight of it himself. It was just behind him, therefore, when he stepped into it." "Was there anyone in the automobile?" "Yes." "Could you see them?" "Langdon was overlooked at the 1747 answers he was receiving. If he had trained this man for a couple of days he could not have asked for better results.

"No. I could see an arm as somebody opened the door for Mr. Pollock, and I heard a voice say, 'It's all right, chief. It's a check.' "Then the engine made such a noise I couldn't hear any more. You know how those machines do down out every-thing sometimes, sir." (To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

A Simple Way to Remove Dandruff There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then get dandruff entirely. So do this, just get about four ounces of Bleis, common liquid arvon from any drug store. This is all you will need, apply it at night when retiring, use enough to wet the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips. By morning, wash it off with soap and dandruff will be gone, and there is no more application will completely destroy and entirely restore every single hair and scalp of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have. You will find all itching and stinging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.—Advertisement.

But, sometimes I think it's worse than workin' for a livin'." "He won't the matter with you?" exclaimed his companion, "Waddy mean 'a tabin' all de joy out of life?" Philadelphia Ledger.

What's in a Name? An old colored woman who had been a former servant of an American family, proudly brought her grandchildren for her old mistress to see. The three little darlings stood solidly in line, while old Charley talked about them to the lady who asked the latter.

"De's got all fower names, mimmie," replied the grandmother. "Ah name them myself. De biggest one's name Glad, de next one's name Helen, de next one's name Mandy. And what's de name of de little one?" "Very pretty," was the ex-mistress' comment. "And what's de third one?" "Flower name again, mimmie. 'She an' 'Artificial'." "Phone your Want Ads to The Bee.

Colic Defends Children. Mrs. O. L. Crossman, wife of a section foreman at Granite Point, Nev., has to thank a set of colic dogs for saving her two children from a rabid coyote.

The vicious animal attacked the little ones while they played in the back yard, but was held at bay by the dog unit. Mrs. Crossman secured a gun and shot the coyote was plainly rabid.—Sacramento Bee.

Says Body Is a Poison Factory Urges everyone to drink glass of hot water before breakfast. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated from the system each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infect the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste, toxins and promaine-like poisons are formed and soaked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons and toxins and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh. Those who are subject to sick headache, colds, biliousness, constipation, others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, saugy stomach after meals, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember inside bathing is more important than outside bathing, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing poor health, while the bowels clean, sweaters and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.—Advertisement.

TO RECALL ARMY IF RUPTURE COMES Break with Germany would Mean Withdrawal of American Forces from Mexico.

VILLA PURSUIT AT STANDSTILL

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The administration is waiting on further reports from American officers in Mexico before deciding whether the expedition seeking Villa shall be withdrawn or reinforced for further operations. Indications at the War department bore out press reports from the front that the pursuit of Villa was temporarily at a standstill.

It was thought probable, though no official would talk about this phase of the question, that the German situation would have some bearing upon the impending decision. If a break in diplomatic relations with Germany is foreseen by the administration it is virtually certain that the troops will be recalled from Mexico immediately. They would be needed at home as military prudence would require that steps be taken to prepare for eventualities in Europe.
