The Busy Bees

O LICENSE cats or not to license cats? That is a question which few weeks after I looked in their nest it is bothering a good many of the elders of the Busy Bees, par- a hollow hole in the tree, and there were ticularly members of the Nebraska Audubon society. The Audubons, you know, are lovers of birds, and they argue that stray be big and in the fall they flew to the cats, and even more prosperous ones, kill thousands of songbirds | south. I hope they will build in the same each year, therefore something ought to be done to protect our little place next year. feathered friends.

They have also laid another charge at the door of poor kitty, and that is that she is the conveyor of disease germs. All of which sounds pretty bad for kitty, doesn't it?

What do the Busy Bees think we should do with cats? Shall they be licensed just as dogs, and shall we have an official cat-catcher as we Defends Birds.

By Glenn Thomas, Age.; 10 Years, Clarks, Neb. Red Side.

It used to be thought that some birds did harm and it is still thought the same by some people to this day. When we see a grow or black bird in the field where We are planting corn we may think they are digging up the corn, and say, "Look at that pesky bird digging up my corn," but the birds are only digging out bugs and worms. Instead of harming us they are help-when we see him in the orchard.

Some birds raise their young entirely on bugs and worms. In the west the locosts are eaten by all kind of birds. Hardly any bird will so past one Insect to find another one. When the seed of the weeds fall off, the birds eat them and so keep many weeds from growing.

The quail cats seed from the weeds as the ragweed, jewel weed, pig weed, pigcon grass and sheep-sorrel. It also cats maccia such as the potato bugs and grass-

The dove eats corn, wheat and nate, but only eats what is shattered after harvest. Also the turtle dove cats caterpillars. Forty doves eat the average of the caterpillars, forty-four beetles and ninety grasshoppers. Anta injure timber, but many of them are devoured by the woodpeaker. The king bird is a good protection to the chicken yard because they drive away the chicken hawk. Mon that keep honey been do not like the hing bird because he eats their bees. The brown thrush eats many kinds such as grasshoppers, bugs and of inaccts, spiders. It is (as many other birds), a friend of the farmer. The robin cats a good many angle

Lives Far from Town.

By Harold Ekwall, Aged 8 Years, Upton. Wyo. Red Side.

I am a boy 8 years old. I have a brother 5 years old. We go three and a half miles to school. Our sister is the teacher and paps takes all of us part way in the buggy and comes pert way for us in the ening. In going to school we pass a falfa hay. When the ground was covered with snow we could see from fifty to 100 ack rabbits playing around the ranchsee them play bide and seek in the sage brush or chase each other over the hills. Before any one shot at them you could get within ten or twenty feet of some of them. We live twenty-two miles from town, so do not go in very often.

Arbor Day

Nebraska has given many good ideas to the world, but none better than the idea of Arbor day. The early settlers of Nebraska looked out from the little fringe of Nebraska looked out from the little a settler 100 worth of his property was exempt from taxation. Money was very scarce in those days. Here was a chance for the settlers to pay their taxes by planting trees on their own claims. As a result of this law nearly all the claims soon had enough trees growing on them to exempt the settlers from paying any taxes. Consequently so little money came into the state treasury that there can be settlered in the settlers from paying any taxes.
