It was on the anniversary of the Battle of Lexington, which opened the Revolution, and the anniversary of the first spilling of blood in the Civil War that President Wilson came before the joint session of Congress and announced his dispatch of a virtual ultimatum to the German Government. THE LITERARY DIGEST for April 29th, in presenting the consensus of editorial opinion throughout the country upon the situation, shows that the general feeling may be summed up in the words of the New York Globe: "The summons has come to every American to manifest true faith and allegiance and to repress in his breast the foul spirits of divisive strife and pettifogging partizanship. America must be put first, and the only effective way to put America first is to rally about the center of national Authority.'
