SOCIAL AFTERNOON AT COUNTRY CLUB

Such an Idea is Being Considered for the Outdoor Season About to Be Opened.

MEN MAY COME TO THE TEA

By MELLIFLICIA—May 10.

It may be that the Country club will have for the season about to open a "social afternoon" every week, much on the same model as the far-famed afternoon affairs at Meadow Brook, or that will newer pattern of country club excursions, the Piping Rock Club on Long Island.

The afternoon chosen will either Tuesday or Thursday, so as to fall upon one of the dancing days, or rather nights, Wednesday and Saturday.

If this idea of a special afternoon, especially featured in the club doings of the week, becomes a reality, all the members are to make it a point to put in an appearance, and a group of matrons will be chosen each week for the hostesses with girls to pour tea.

The only obstacle which now seems to stand in the way of social afternoons at the Country club is the question whether the men can finish with their business affairs early enough in the day to be in time for a cup of tea and a chat all around with the matrons and girls.

"Life" has facetiously referred to the flocking of men to the Meadow Brook club in day time as "meetings of the unemployed."

Omaha's unemployed do not belong to the Country club—and here is the problem to be solved.

German Sailor Lad
Walks Across the Country for Health

Walking from New York to San Francisco to regain his health, Walter Wadsworth, a 21-year-old German sailor, with a recital of a series of highly-colored adventures in the last few years, is making a short sojourn in Omaha.

He has a letter from the German consulate in New York to the German consulate in San Francisco, and while in Omaha visited representatives of local German societies.

The young Teuton's wanderlust and spirit of adventure have taken him to widely scattered parts of the world. The lad—for he is but a lad—was arrested as a spy by the British authorities at Santa Lucia, British West Indies, shortly after the outbreak of the European war, according to his story. He was released after twenty-six hours' imprisonment, after having resigned himself to his expected fate—to be shot as a spy.

Young Wadsworth, which the way isn't his right name, has papers to show that he has been in the merchant marine service of Germany, England, Norway and the United States. He was on the British steamer Claverhall when the world was started.

Wadsworth's father died recently after twenty-nine years' service in the German army. A younger brother is in the trenches at Verdun. The family home is in Posen.

In his wanderings the German youth has been through Europe, Africa and South America. He intends to sail from "Frisco" to China and the orient. He speaks seven languages.

His "field equipment" on his transcontinental tramp consists of a German regulation army knapsack and a walking stick. He wears knee pants and goes barefoot.
