FORT ARMSTRONG IS ONE CENTURY OLD

Centennial of Historic Fortress to Be Celebrated With Week of Pageants and Spectacles. THREE CITIES ARE INTERESTED

Rock Island, Ill., May 16.—The Fort Armstrong centennial celebration to be staged on Rock Island, midway in the Mississippi river between Rock Island and Davenport, June 18-25, is expected to be one of the biggest events attempted in the middle west by any community in the last quarter of a century.

Many Organizations Interested. The celebration is being staged by the Fort Armstrong Centennial association, an organization of prominent business men of Davenport, Rock Island and Moline, whose efforts are under the direction of the Rock Island Historical society and the historical section of the Davenport Academy of Science.

Battles with Indians. Many of the hardest battles the whites had during the period beginning in 1805 to suppress the Indians and take possession of the fertile Mississippi valley were fought within a stone's throw of the imposing public and business buildings of the tri-cities.

Legend of the Caves. There is the legend of the caves on Rock Island. These caves are three in number and, according to the Indians, a great white bird, a special messenger of the Great Spirit, occupied these caves and at various intervals would come from the cave and carry reports of the tribes to the legend hunting grounds.

French Steamship Companies Make Poor Showing. (Correspondence of the Associated Press.) Paris, May 16.—While France suffers from the extraordinary ocean freight rates now prevailing, her steamship owners reap little or none of the profits.

Chill of Winter Over. "We do not know when the war will be over, but we do know that spring is here," say the soldiers. The second winter in the trenches is finished. Its chill, wet monotony is over.

Never so far as one can learn, have there been so many Germans and so many allied troops on the western front as at this time. Next to the Verdun region the German concentration is heaviest in face of the British of any section from the North Sea to Switzerland.

Whatever fighting there was through the winter and there now is along the British front might best be described as trench raids. One side or the other demolishes a section of enemy trench by exploding mines or by artillery concentration. Then the infantry rushes the trench, gathers in some prisoners, does what damage it can and returns to its own trench.
