Shackleton Describes Terrible Experiences After Leaving Endurance Fought.

FIGHTING THROUGH BLIZZARDS

London, June 2.—A long dispatch from Lieutenant Sir Ernest Shackleton, who has arrived at Port Stanley, Falkland islands, describes the misfortunes which overtook his Antarctic expedition. His ship Endurance was struck by an iceberg in the Weddell sea Nov. 4, and abandoned on October 20. Shackleton and his crew reached Elephant Island on October 24 on boats after a series of privations and sufferings in the drift ice, several of the party being then on the verge of physical collapse.

Owing to the seriousness of the food situation and the impossibility of finding any very satisfactory camping place on the bleak space Shackleton decided to make an effort to reach South Georgia, 760 miles distant, leaving the main party on Elephant Island in charge of Frank Wild, the second in command.

Leaves With Five.

Lieutenant Shackleton left on April 24 with five volunteers. Then ensued a fortnight of terrible struggles against blizzards and other difficulties, but finally the west coast of South Georgia was sighted. After a mighty effort lasting two days, they succeeded in beaching their boat, and four days later arrived safely at the head of King Haakon bay. On May 19 they started to cross the island, reaching the Stromness whaling station on May 26. There they obtained an 80-ton Norwegian whaler for an attempt to relieve the men left behind.

The whaler started south with a volunteer crew on May 26, but they found the ice too formidable for an unprotected boat and after several attempts reluctantly decided to turn north for assistance to the Falklands.

The party on the beach at Elephant Island were all well when Shackleton left on April 24. They had five weeks' provisions, with the possibility of reinforcing these by the capture of seals.

Work of the Expedition.

The work of the expedition to date, says Lieutenant Shackleton, includes the discovery of 200 miles of new coast line, a complete hydrological survey of the Weddell sea, the elimination of South Greenland from the map, continuous magnetic and meteorological observations, important biological observations, cinema records to October 30 and photographic records up to date.

As far as is known not a single man of the expedition lost his life, but the anxiety will not be at an end until all the men now marooned in the south polar regions have been accounted for. Lieutenant Shackleton's story is a narrative of conquest by sheer courage and endurance of difficulties as nearly insurmountable as ever a similar expedition encountered.

Almost from the first after starting from South Georgia in December, 1914, Shackleton's ship, the Endurance, experienced unfavorable conditions.

Forges Through Floes.

Within a month the little ship was forging its way through ice floes. A new land, with a coast line of about 200 miles and great glaciers discharging into the sea, was discovered during this period. Future maps will show this latest addition to British territory—named Caird Coast—but will have no mention of New South Greenland, which Shackleton proved to be a myth. Shackleton's soundings in the region heretofore charted on the maps of New South Greenland are declared to have shown 1901 fathoms of water.

After this achievement was soon afterwards overshadowed by a foreboding that the approaching season was likely to be abnormal one. A "great migration of thousands of seals northward" was observed. They were escaping from a doom of which they had been forewarned by instinct. The Endurance pushed on, only to meet with worse conditions. At length it became wedged in ice floes, while bergs towered above it as though they might at any moment overwhelm the vessel. For weeks on end the Endurance resisted the pressure, but by August it was apparent it must be crushed into a mass of splinters. The party was then forced to make camp on one of the ice floes.

End of the Endurance.

Then came the end of the Endurance. "The terrific pressure," says Shackleton, "terminated in the tearing out of the stern and rudder posts. The main deck drove upwards, ice cut into the hull, the fires were extinguished and caught in a trap from which there was no escape, the vessel became a hopeless wreck.

The little party of explorers found themselves strangers in a frozen world of their own. They were the sole inhabitants of the field of ice. Their only sustenance was the small supply of provisions taken from Endurance.

Days of Danger.

Their only hope of safety was residing in three small boats. Days of danger followed. An attempt to escape was foiled after a period of fruitless effort. "At times," says Shackleton, "the various units were isolated on separate floes until there was nothing to be done but to retreat and await developments. "Patience camp" was set up and there these solitary men passed February and March of last year, slowly drifting north. Winter descended on them. They saw the desired land at times, but could not reach it. At length the floe on which they were imprisoned split in pieces under the influence of the wind and the marooned men had to take to their frail boats.

Another floe was selected for a night's rest but it broke up under their feet. Then came a period of arduous boat work. The party was threatened by wind, sea and ice until, after many days and worn out by hardships, they arrived at Elephant Island on April 11. A gale was blowing as though the elements had determined that an man should reach safety. But the haven was eventually won.

CAPTURED FOKKER AEROPLANE. (MINTZ FILM SERVICE.)

London, June 1.—Writing in a London newspaper, a British air pilot today gives the following account of the swift, daring stratagem of air battles:

"Before November, 1915, enemy airmen were loath to give fight at any price. The Fokker, with its appearance and the German airman became not only willing, but anxious. The fighting aeroplane, or to give it its official title, the battleplane, is a machine of an entirely different type from those used for reconnaissance and 'gun spotting' work. Its main duty is to convoy the bombers on raiding expeditions and to beat off any attacks that may be made upon them.

"It is essential that it shall be able to climb rapidly and that it has a powerful engine, in order that if it is out-numbered it can get away by means of superior speed."

"The preferable types of machine for this class of work are those of the 'pusher' (propeller behind) and 'double' engine variety.

"By removing the propeller blades from the forepart of the fuselage (body) the gunner is given at least an 80 per cent wider field of fire.

"When the firing is through the propeller the accuracy entirely depends on the skill of the pilot in maneuvering the machine into the required position—that is with the nose pointing directly towards the other machine.

"Thus it will be seen that with each movement of the attacked the attacker must immediately follow suit and the probability is that if he is not wary enough he will be led into a trap over the enemy guns."

NEW ATHLETIC CLUB BOOSTED AT DINNER

Hundred Business Men, as Guests of Quinlan, Hear Financial Plans.

CAMPAIGN FOR NEW MEMBERS

That the new athletic club of Omaha is an assured success was evident from the enthusiasm which was manifest at the dinner given last evening at the Fontenelle to launch the proposition. An even hundred sat around the board as the guests of Thomas F. Quinlan, who is chairman of the membership committee and heard the directors tell their plans to give Omaha an athletic club second to none in the country. That the financing of the club is assured was easily gathered by the remarks of the speakers who have been at work for some weeks preparing to launch the enterprise formally.

Financial Plans.

The way the club is to be financed was told by A. W. Jefferis, general counsel. He said the club had already been incorporated by the directors for $750,000 and that all that was necessary was to raise $250,000 through memberships. It is proposed to have 300 life members at $500, the life memberships being free from dues. There are to be 1,000 memberships at $100 initiation with annual dues of $50. There will also be non-resident memberships with $25 initiation and $25 annual dues.

Two Mortgages Given.

The ground cost the club $220,000 and there will be a mortgage loan of one-half the cost of ground and building. This will take care of everything except the furnishings and to raise the money for this Arthur D. Brandeis has agreed to take $100,000 in second mortgage bonds. Mr. Jefferis said that with the initiation and dues and the rent, the club will have plenty of finances for its support.

Committee to Start Soon.

W. A. Fraser, president of the club, was toastmaster, and he assured the members that the athletic club would stand alone with no affiliations with other clubs and that no other club would be jeopardized. He said he was sure the memberships would all be secured within sixty days. He said that membership committees would sail forth at once and that a committee would pass upon all applications as the club was to be of the highest class where any member would be pleased to bring his wife and sister.

H. H. Baldrige said that athletics were underdone in the average American city and too little attention was given to the development of the body and in this day of efficiency when we all want to see how much we can do, a sound physical body is the basis of success. Too many put off exercising when they leave school until it is too late to find some sport to which they can adopt themselves.

Ben Baker and Judge Wharton put themselves up as shining examples of what a little judicious exercise will do toward keeping a man young and to keep down the "paunch" to which too many are susceptible.

Omaha a Real City.

That Omaha had passed the stage of a village and had ascended into the metropolitan class and should have real city airs was the thought of R. L. Metcalfe. He said that Omaha had never fallen down yet when it undertook some really great work and that it would not miss out on this undertaking. Tom Quinlan and John Madden told of the membership plans and Henry C. Murphy brought the message that the men of the South Side were strong for the new club.

Norse Steamer Aground.

St. John's, N. F., June 1.—The Norwegian steamer Lingford, grain laden, went aground off Holy Road in St. Mary's bay and the southern coast today. It was said tonight that she was likely to become a total wreck.

Culls From the Wire

Two real estate brokers and a minister 41 years of age were given jail sentences in the San Francisco federal court after pleading guilty to a conspiracy to use the mails to defraud in a land settlement scheme. They are Byron J. Sanford, Rev. Richard Lusk, and J. F. Kelley.

The Western Union Telegraph company. It was announced at a meeting of the Montana State Utilities commission at Helena, that negotiations pending whereby the Western Union will take over the Continental Telegraph company's lines in Montana. The Continental operates along the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway company's right-of-way. It was also disclosed that the Western Union last week took over all of the great Northern Telegraph company's lines in the state.
