Princeton University. The Princeton University has discovered the reason and the cure. Princeton, N. J., June 4.—Student editors of the Princeton university campus have discovered what is ailing the modern college youth. They have named it "a sublime indifference for the future" and have announced that the ailment is about to be cured.

Two-thirds of the men who make a failure of their college work and "flunk out" of Princeton are according to the Daily Princetonian, those who have failed to profit by their failures of other years.

To solve the problem of accumulated failures the university authorities will next fall introduce a system designed to do away with student thoughtlessness and sublime indifference and jacking by first impressions. The new system will meet with great favor.

The plan divides conditions into two classes. Class F includes failures removable by examination and Class R includes those so serious that they cannot be removed by examination. In the latter case the conditioned student must repeat entirely the course in which he has failed and pass satisfactorily. In repeating a course, however, a student must not receive more than one of his regular courses till a later term, and can only carry more than the regular number of courses a term when he enters, free of conditions.

Those who took the examination were Gay H. Farnes, Norfolk; Francis Scholch, Bloomington; Ed Thompson, Omaha; F. E. Dickerson, Guide Rock; H. F. Johnson, Geneva; and Elmer Sandberg, Kansas.

It is to continue the work in these departments in the interest of graduate study that the new endowment is to be utilized by the college.

This means the beginning of the establishment of a graduate school at Haverford college, which, however, will not extend beyond the subjects endowed by this gift.

It was also announced that bequest amounting to about $146,000 had been received from the children of Gideon Beall, 43, a Haverford resident in England, who had recently died.
