Reality of Maturity Where Excels Illusions of Youth

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1916, Star Co. Every day I hear men and women of middle age sighing for the lost illusions of youth.

As the embroidered work of art is more beautiful than the stamped pattern, so are the realities of mature life more beautiful than the illusions of youth, if we have used care in the stitching Even if we have married the design, we have the added experience which youth lacks, and we are pre-pared to do better work on the next pattern given by the Great Artist. Too late! There is no such thing as any knowledge, or success, or happiness coming too late.

There is no such thing as time, save in our own imagination.
It is all eternity. It is a circle without beginning or end.

We have always lived, and will always live. There is no need of letting your body, your heart or your mind wither away because a few years have gone by, and the tradi-tion of men tells you that youth has

Leads

BY THE JESTER.

It caught my eye the other day, this phrase with which I have headed my article. In these easy I have bemy article. In these cays I have be come accustomed to regard it al-most as a platitude. I didn't know that we male things led in sufficient anythings to need emphasizing the fact that girls lead in one special di-rection. I fancied we merely fol-lowed nowadays. I believe I think so still so still Having to fill a column, it is of course no good taking the converse. "Where girls don't lead" would leave me staring at a blank writing block for hours together. No, let the title stand as it is. They often lead me a devil of a dance. I readily admit, but tis a pleasant one (sometimes), and the "sometimes" makes up for the others.

The old idea, generally accepted and I believe originally intended, was that man led because he was the stronger sex. He was, furthermore, perfectly prepared to substantiate the claim if any of his womankind disputed his right-for which purpose he kept his club handy, and never let his arm weaken from want of practice.

Followed then the so to say conscientious objectors, who argued thus:

"We are indisputably the stronger sex, therefore we will be content, having the strength, not to use it. merely to talk about it, because we know we possess it. Seeing men waver, girls naturally leapt at the chance.

"You mustn't hit us," said they; you must talk to us and coax us. We're weaker than you are."

So man started to argue instead, and he's got the worst of the argu-ment ever since. Provided she's really pretty, really dainty and really fascinating, you can back any girl in the world to twist the biggest, the strongest, or the cleverest man, round her little finger in less time than it takes to write this sentence.

What is more, she will back her-self to do it. When she fails she usually marries him to get to the bottom of the puzzle that way. Girls love novelties. Having solved the problem it ceases to interest her.

A certain literary crank, whose ideas, possibly, had been warped by bitter home experiences, once wrote While they last youth lasts.

Keep love, sympathy and faith alive of the sexes: "Woman should be kept in a hutch at the bottom of the garden."

Personally, I never hold with mere vulgar abuse, but I think some of us realize that there is a substratum of truth underlying the remark.

I am beginning to realize myself that girls do lead nowadays in nearly everything. And what is more, they lead in most cases in the cleverest of ways, by letting us men believe that
