

LAUDS SCIENTISTS BEFORE O. U. GRADS

Dean Cutter Tells of Debt Due Pioneers in Field of Knowledge.

TWENTY-TWO GET DIPLOMAS

Twenty-two graduates, the largest number in the history of the University of Omaha, received degrees at the seventh annual commencement exercises held in John Jacobs Memorial hall last evening. The graduation marked a new epoch in the history of the university, as it was the first time that students of the law department have held joint exercises with the college of liberal arts and sciences.

Dr. Irving S. Cutter, dean of the college of medicine of the University of Nebraska, was the commencement speaker. In his talk of the "Achievements of Biological Science," he outlined the progress made in medicine for the last two centuries.

He traced step by step the great discoveries and their benefits to man. He eulogized the work of such scientists as Pasteur, Morton, Erlich, Hunter, and Lister. Comparing these scientists to the graduates, he said that the proof of their ability was not in what they knew, but in how they spread it among the people. Just as these men spread their learning and helped mankind, he urged the students to spread their knowledge and help the less fortunate.

"The people of this age should respect scientific men," he said. "In the past our greatest discoveries were made at a time when the theories of their time were the debt we owe these people can never be paid. Some of them spent their entire time and even gave up their lives to prove that they were right. And all for what? Simply to try and alleviate the suffering of mankind, to add another stepping stone to the wheel of progress. The big men toiled for what they got. The proof of the ability of you graduates lies on the problem now confronting you."

Dr. D. E. Jenkins, president of the university, presided at the exercises. In a brief talk he gave a resume of the work accomplished this season. "At no time in the history of the university has the outlook been as bright as at present," he said. "We have accomplished more this year than ever before, and I look forward to the time in the near future when our present campus will be adorned with a large new building."

Dr. Jenkins told of several contributions to the building fund, and said that the required amount of $50,000 for the erection of a new building was practically raised, but that the board had decided to increase the amount to $75,000 in order that a more substantial structure could be built. The letter of George A. Joslyn offering $25,000 on condition that a like sum be raised, was also read by Dr. Jenkins.

Lauds Work of President. Archie Carpenter, chairman of the board of trustees, commended the work of President Jenkins, and in a short talk called "A Vision," he told of future prospects in store for the university. "I look forward to the time," he said, "when the University of Omaha will be one of the most valued assets in the city."

Ex-Mayor of Toledo Is Found Not Guilty

Toledo, O., June 9.—Former Mayor Carl Keller, charged with bribery in connection with the purchase of fire apparatus for the city, was found not guilty by a jury here this afternoon.

It was Mr. Keller's second trial, the first having resulted in jury disagreement. The former mayor, as city executive, was charged with having accepted an automobile and $500 for turning the contract to a Cleveland firm.

TWO ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF STEALING AN AUTO

John Keyla, a bartender, living at 1536 South Twenty-fourth street, and L. J. Creamer, 828 South Twenty-fourth street, were arrested at Thirtieth and Farram streets by police Officer James Murphy, on a charge of having stolen an automobile from Falls City, Neb., Wednesday.

The men confessed to the theft, the police say, and directed the police to the car which they had hid at the home of Keyla. They also admitted that they gave the clerk an assumed name to obtain a license for the car. A reward of $225 for the capture and conviction of the men awaits Officer Murphy.

Text of Diplomatic Correspondence of Moose and the G.O.P.

Chicago, June 9.—The letter written by Secretary O. K. Davis of the progressive convention to Chairman Warren G. Harding of the republican convention submitting the peace conference resolution was as follows:

"By direction of the progressive national convention I transmit for the consideration of the republican national convention a copy of a resolution duly adopted by the progressive national convention at its afternoon session June 8, 1916."

The resolution reads:

"In the spirit of the statement at the meeting of its national committee held on January 11 last past, the national convention of the progressive party invites and requests the national convention of the republican party to appoint a committee of conference to meet and confer with a similar committee from this body."

Chairman Harding replied:

"Upon receipt of your communication of today conveying the resolution passed by the progressive national convention, I read the same to the national convention in session assembled this afternoon and beg to reply that the convention directed me to appoint a committee of five to confer

SIX THOUSAND DIE IN WEEK-OF-CANADIAN BAND

Ottawa, June 9.—Upwards of 6,000 Canadians have fallen within a week in the desperate fighting in and around Sanctuary Woods, according to a statement made by Major General Samuel Hughes, minister of militia, in presenting colors to a Canadian regiment on Parliament hill today.

"The great majority, wounded," he said, "already are clamoring to get back into the fray, but many of the gallant lads have gone down never to rise again. We deeply mourn their loss, but that loss affords an inspiration for tens of thousands more to take their place."

A bill for relief of 500 mail contractors in the south, whose pay was withheld during the civil war, passed the house.

NEBRASKANS' LIKE PARTY'S PLATFORM

Think It Broad Enough for All Good Americans to Stand Up Together.

STAGE SET FOR NOMINATION

BY EDGAR C. SNYDER.
Chicago, June 9.—Special Telegram.—So far as the republican national convention is concerned, the stage is set for a presidential nomination by 12 o'clock tomorrow night. The platform has been adopted; the rules of 1908 with modifications to suit changes endorsed, the several contests happily settled; the temporary organization made permanent and it is now up to the delegates to the convention to get down to the business that called them to this rain-bedraggled, sewer-stopped, mud-coagulated metropolis of a mighty west, namely to nominate a ticket that will be triumphantly elected on November 7.

Of the platform much will be written in praise or criticism in the coming months. Its brevity will attract or repel. Its ringing declaration as to labor, its recognition of equal suffrage, but passing its enactment to the several states, will be praised or condemned dependent upon just how much of a suffragist one is. Its Americanism is pronounced, its economic features reflective of the best traditions of a great party.

Jansen Likes It.
Peter Jansen of Beatrice, one of the strong, virile men of a really very great convention, a wheel horse in republican ranks for many years, and the Nebraska member of the committee on resolutions, said of the platform:

"It is one that any republican can stand upon. It is that precise and terse. Enough material was presented to the committee on resolutions to fill an American encyclopedia on politics. It is American to the core and the platform ought to be acceptable to labor and to capital alike. It ought to be acceptable to stalwarts and progressives alike."

In this connection it may not be out of place to say that the resolutions committee had a long and sometimes heated debate over a proposed section relating to compulsory military education in the common schools. Peter Jansen was a pronounced opponent of the proposition, which was finally defeated by a vote of 23 to 19.

Then, too, the committee had a spirited fight over the suffrage plank, several substitutes being offered to the plank as originally prepared. But after "full and free discussion," it was finally decided to accept the short form on suffrage as it now appears.

E. M. Pollard of Nebraska and a delegate from the First district, voiced his approval of the platform by saying, "I am glad the resolutions committee included suffrage in the platform. This is one of the best evidences of the tendencies of the republican party and shows that the party of Lincoln, Grant and McKinley is abreast of the time. The platform as a whole is most inspiring, the best in my time. It is broad enough for every American to stand on."

But Pollard is not the only member of the Nebraska delegation to get "chasty" over the platform. O. R. Thompson of Wisner being another booster for the skillful partisanship shown in its construction.

Howard Baldrige was compelled to retire to his hotel today on account of a mild attack of indigestion.
