H. S. Cadets to Have Annual Drill at Fort Omaha Tuesday

The annual competitive drill of the high school cadets will be held at Fort Omaha on Tuesday afternoon. With a full week of good training at camp last week the cadets are in great condition to put up a good showing. Prizes are awarded to the best drilled cadet in the individual drill, the best drilled company, and best drilled battalion.
 The cadet ranking first in the individual drill is presented with an American flag and a gold medal. An equal number of cadets are entered from each company and are chosen from those ranking highest in the company spell-downs held during the year.
 The drill will be judged by officers of the regular army.
 The promotions in the cadet regiment for next year will be announced during the regimental drill which follows the competitive drills.

Hughes and Wilson Both Will Walk in Flag Day Parade

Washington, June 12.—Charles E. Hughes promised tonight to march in the preparedness parade to be held here Wednesday, provided business does not take him out of town on that day. President Wilson in response to an invitation from the arrangements committee already has promised to head the parade, to review it from a stand in front of the White House, and later to deliver an address on "America First."
 The demonstration, in which many other high officials are expected to take part, will be the principal feature of the capital's celebration of flag day. It was arranged by industrial, religious and social organizations, and government employes have been granted a half holiday in order to march.

WORKMEN CELEBRATE THEIR MEMORIAL DAY

Despite the fact that the weather was most unpromising, a large audience assembled before the speakers' stand at Hanscom park Sunday to listen to the program prepared by the local camps, Ancient Order of United Workmen and Degree of Honor, for the celebration of their annual Floral day. About five hundred persons were present.
 The program was opened with a selection by the Ancient Order of United Workmen No. 17, military band, followed by a prayer by Rev. Mr. Cornish. Following the prayer Dr. A. G. A. Buxton, rector of the St. Paul's Episcopal church, Council Bluffs, pronounced a eulogy which will be long remembered by those who heard him speak.
 In the course of his talk, Dr. Buxton portrayed most vividly the value of a memorial day, not to an organization alone but to the nation as well. In speaking of fraternalism he said: "What the world needs is fraternalism, not lodgism, or churchism, and fraternalism is brotherhood as taught by Christ."

War

The great bargain we offer—the new Encyclopaedia Britannica, unabridged, complete, in a new handy form at an unprecedentedly low price—was all created before the war, the preparations, contracts and purchases made. We could offer this bargain, we could make these prices, only because of huge purchases at very low prices and great economies in manufacture. We could not do it now; nor can we obtain any more sets at anything like present prices.

After next Saturday you will have to pay from $11 per set to $19 per set more (according to the binding) for identically the same work.

If you are thrifty, you will save this money; if you are careless, hesitating, you will lose it, —because you need the Encyclopaedia Britannica in your home. Your family needs it; the children especially. And if it is the right kind of a home you will have it there.

Remember, after you receive the complete set of 29 volumes you have three full weeks in which to make up your mind whether you want to keep them.

The Tremendous Cost of the New Eleventh Edition

It seems almost unbelievable to say that a million and a half dollars could be spent on any single set of books (especially if these books were to be sold for a total of fifty or sixty dollars). Only one work in the whole history of publishing has ever cost so much and that is the new Eleventh Edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

It cost this enormous sum first of all because it is a work of the highest authorities in every field of human knowledge. It could have been compiled by hack writers for a tenth this sum; but it would not have been the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

The contributing staff includes representatives from 81 different universities in 21 different countries, and from 65 other colleges, a total of over 700 university and college experts.

And all of these have won distinction in their special fields.

The 1500 contributors furnished a total of over 40,000 articles. Every one of these 40,000 articles had to be verified, edited, compressed and trimmed into its allotted space. Thousands of these articles were submitted to two or more experts for revision and criticism.

It is this sort of patience and thoroughness and prodigal outlay which has made the Encyclopaedia Britannica the one work of its kind in all the world. If you buy anything else you buy something inferior—something cheaply made, just to sell.

A Library To Be Proud Of

If you have a taste for a smartly kept home—whether large or small—

If in that home you have a well-selected collection of books—whether it be large or small—

If in your conversation you reveal a knowledge of books and events and history—and if your children are bright and well-informed—you inevitably gain distinction in the eyes of your neighbors and your friends.

Towards all this the possession of the Encyclopaedia Britannica contributes immensely. Everyone knows that it is the greatest reference work in the world—the highest authority—the last word.

From it you can cultivate as richly stored a mind as most people get from the finest university training (and the odd thing to it is that the 41,000 articles of the Britannica form a mine of interesting reading as well).

A dollar, with the order form adjoining, brings you the complete work.

What Every Woman Should Know

In these days of Woman's Clubs, Suffrage meetings, Better Mothers, Better Babies, and Better Homes, the modern woman must be far better "prepared" than the woman of former times.

But very few women have any real chance to gain a thorough education or really to learn much. Not one woman in 200 in the United States goes to college.

This is just why the Encyclopaedia Britannica has been such a splendid uplift and aid to many brilliant women, and to lots of others who just want to know a little more than they do. Mrs. Kate Waller Barrett, President of the National Council of Women, says that her children were very largely brought up on the Encyclopaedia Britannica and that she herself owes to it an immense debt.

In hundreds of women's clubs it has already become known as an unfailing source of reference in debates and discussions. Actually many women's clubs have purchased it.

Almost every woman in the land can now own the newest edition of the Britannica in the daintiest and most attractive form in which this or any other encyclopaedia was ever issued.

And the volumes of the Britannica lend an unusual stamp of distinction and refinement to every home in which they are found.

A Miracle of Compactness

If you are familiar with the older issue of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, you instinctively think of it as a huge work in 25 to 35 volumes, occupying eight feet or so on your bookshelves.

The 29 volumes of the new "Handy Volume" Issue take up only 32 inches on the bookshelf and weigh only about 50 pounds.

Get every one of the 30,000 pages of the great Cambridge University issue in here, without the abridgment of a line or a word.

In the handsome bookcase here shown you can pick it up and move it anywhere you like (or put it in your trunk and take it off to the country with you if you like).

And each volume, printed on the beautiful India paper, is so light that you can hold it in your hand and read for an hour with no sense of fatigue.

Never was any great work of reference issued in such a compact and handy form.

And the amazing thing of it is that it actually costs you only one-third the price charged for the largest-sized Cambridge University issue of identically the same work.

See our guarantee below. An order form is in the adjoining circle.

Our Absolute Guarantee

We Guarantee that the "Handy Volume" Issue is authorized by the publishers of the new Encyclopaedia Britannica; that its contents are identical, page for page including every map and illustration, with the Cambridge University issue now selling at three times the price; that it is manufactured by the same printers and binders as the more expensive book; that it is printed on the same quality of India paper, from newly made plates; and that, because it is smaller, it is easier to handle than the Cambridge issue.

We Guarantee complete and entire satisfaction with the contents of the Encyclopaedia Britannica and with the form of our "Handy Volume" Issue. To anyone, who for any reason is not satisfied and returns the set within three weeks, we guarantee to return all he has paid (including shipping charges).
