YOUNG PEOPLE THERE, TOO

Nature smiled upon the members of the Douglas County association of Douglas County Pioneers Saturday afternoon when they held their an nual picnic, and if they had been making the day to order they could not have turned out a more perfect one. As a result, some 400 of the men and women who came to Nebraska when it was in its swaddling clothes, together with half as many young people, gathered under the shade of the trees in the southeast corner of Miller park, where they spent a greater portion of the day. With the Douglas County Pioneers the annual picnic is regarded as one of the most enjoyable of outings, and the one held yesterday was no exception. The pioneers commenced to gather at the picnic grounds as early as 10 o'clock in the morning. The early arrivals arranged the benches and the tables for the feed that was scheduled for the afternoon, and then they decorated the speakers' stand with flags, bunting and innumerable bouquets and baskets of flowers. This having been done they awaited the coming of the crowds, entertaining braska when it was in its swaddling bouquets and baskets of flowers. This having been done they awaited the coming of the crowds, entertaining one another with tales of how things were done during the pioneer days in Nebraska, Douglas county and Omaha. And one of the most entertaining of the entertainers was Mrs. Mararet Kennellay who in point of garet Kennelley, who in point of years of residence in Omaha is the dean, or the deaness, of the pioneers. Mrs. Kennelley Tells Experiences.

Mrs. Kennelley Tells Experiences.

Mrs. Kennelley came to Omaha in August, 1854, and consequently she has resided here close to sixty-two years. To the listeners, and there were scores of them, she told of the wilderness that extended all the way from the Missouri river to the Pacific coast at the time of her arrival here with her parents. At the time she came there was no Omaha worth mentioning. There was just a cluster of little houses along the steamboat landing. West of this and beyond, to where earth and sky met, it was just an unbroken wilderness.

It was shortly after noon when the pioneers commenced unpacking the corpulent lunch baskets and laying out the good things to eat. And when the call to lunch was sounded the pioneers had before them a meal that would tempt the appetite of the most exacting domestic scientist. There were meats that were cooked to the most delicate brown, and salads that would make your mouth to the most delicate brown, and sal-ads that would make your mouth water. There were pies and cakes and dainties and, to top off with, an abundance of ice cream for everydamnes and, to top off with, an abundance of ice cream for everybody.

With the conclusion of the basket dinner, W. I. Kierstead, president of the association, mounted the platform, and in one of his characteristic speeches called the assemblage to order. He congratulated the members upon their ability to be in attendance and congratulated the women upon the splendid dinner that they had served. He paid a tribute to the courage of the pioneers who half a century, or more, ago had the courage to leave comfortable eastern homes and penetrate what was then a wilderness, remaining here to see it "blossom like a rose."

Absalom Yost Absent.

Absalom Yost Absent.

Mr. Kierstead called attention to the fact that Absalom Yost, a pioneer of 1854 and a former president of the association, is ill at his home in this city. He asserted that this was the first of the annual picnies that Mr. Yost had missed in years, and that while he was unable to be present, his best wishes were for the enjoyment of his old associates.

In concluding, Mr. Kierstead proposed that a wireless message expressing good cheer be sent to Mr. Yost. For an instant there was perfect quiet, and then, with a mallet, Mr. Kierstead tapped on the table, announcing that the message had been sent and that it had been picked up by Mr. Yost.

As chairman, Mr. O'Brien introduced David H. Mercer, the principal speaker, who at length reviewed the history of Nebraska and its great men. He told of many of the things that had been brought about through their efforts during the days that were not as prosperous as those now. Those assembled joined in singing "The Star Spangled Banner," after which the call for supper was sounded. By those who were not in the secret, the serving of a second meal was looked upon as an impossibility, on account of the presumption that everything had been eaten at the noon meal. But it was another example of feeding the multitude with a few loaves and a few fishes. From under tables more baskets were brought forth, and within the space of a few minutes the tables were again groaning under their loads of good things to eat. Again there was enough and to spare, and after it was all over it was discovered that there were baskets and baskets that had not been opened.

Instead, as darkness commenced to gather, they congregated in little groups and once more lived over the thrilling events of pioneer life in Nebraska, and it was well on toward 9 o'clock before the last one had departed from the park. All in all, it was declared that the picnic was the most successful one that the pioneers had ever held.

A negro brawl between George Phillips and William Huston, both fect quiet, and then, with a mallet, Mr. Kierstead tapped on the table, announcing that the message had been sent and that it had been picked up by Mr. Yost.

As president, Mr. Kierstead introduced Moses P. O'Brien, who presided during the exercises. Mr. O'Brien's address was retrospective. Being a pioneer and the son of a pioneer, General O'Brien, he reviewed the early history of Omaha and Douglas county, as well as that of the state, detailing its growth and what had been accomplished by the pioneers.

"Don't forget that every man is a nan. Don't forget to treat every man as a man. Do that, and you have fulfilled your duty to nature and become an honorable American citizen!" The eyes of A. L. Mohler narrowed and his jaw shot forward in emphasis of each word as he delivered this message to 150 officials of the Union Pacific railroad Saturday at the Omaha club, where with Charles Ware, he was guest of honor at a banquet given on the eve of their re-tirement from railroad life.

Time of Parting.

The lips of the former president of one of the greatest railroads in the world guivered as he spoke. He was parting from friends he had given a lifetime to make. He was parting G. Ware repeated a similar sentiment. He too was parting from the work and friends of a lifetime.

Mr. Mohler, as retiring president of the Union Pacific, and Mr. Ware, as agreeal breaking down due to old retiring general manager, were accorded a stirring demonstration in the Omaha Club.

Both men grew up living, thinking, and breathing Union Pacific, and last night marked their official finis.

Presented With Watch.

When he got up to speak, Mr. Mohler was presented with a beautiful gold watch, appropriately engraved.

"Gentlemen, I'm sorry you gave me this," he exclaimed. "After forty-six years of strenuous work for Union Pacific, this seems, superficial.
