COUNTY BOARD HAS FIRED FRED ROGERS
Superintendent of County Hospital Dismissed and Successor is Appointed.

COUNTY BOARD HAS FIRED FRED ROGERS
Fred Rogers, for the last two and a half years superintendent of the Douglas county hospital, has been discharged and a successor appointed in his place, as was predicted in an exclusive story in The Bee a week ago.

COUNTY BOARD HAS FIRED FRED ROGERS
His dismissal, contrary to expectations, was accomplished painlessly and neatly, but without any demonstration. E. R. Woods, an insurance man, and for fifteen years chairman of the Western Weighing association, has been chosen to succeed Rogers. Mrs. Woods will have the position of matron.

COUNTY BOARD HAS FIRED FRED ROGERS
All Vote for New Head.
When the Board of County Commissioners met Chairman McDonald of the hospital committee presented a resolution, which recommended the appointment of Mr. and Mrs. Woods to the positions of superintendent and matron of the hospital, to succeed Rogers. All the commissioners, except Commissioner Frank Best, were present and voted in favor of the resolution.

COUNTY BOARD HAS FIRED FRED ROGERS
News of trouble at the county hospital was first made public in a story printed in The Bee, in which was told of the request of Commissioner McDonald for Rogers' resignation.

COUNTY BOARD HAS FIRED FRED ROGERS
Rogers was accused, in effect, of insubordination and his administration was talked of as being inefficient. Rogers denied this and refused to resign, but declared that before the end of the string was played the lid of a festering mess of under-cover doings concerning the county commissioners and the hospital would come off.

COUNTY BOARD HAS FIRED FRED ROGERS
"Cut Loose" was the answer of the commissioners when Rogers' statement was given out. Rogers apparently deemed it better to let the lid stay on. At any rate, he failed to appear to tell anything when the commissioners met.

McDonald Talks Back to Patterson
County Commissioner MacDonald has a few things to say about the Omaha Real Estate Exchange in general, and D. C. Patterson, in particular.

McDonald Talks Back to Patterson
Patterson recently achieved an interview in a local newspaper stating that he had saved the county thousands of dollars by filing his suit to test the validity of the $1,700,000 paving and grading bonds. Had he not filed suit, he says, the commissioners would probably have gone ahead with printing and engraving the bond issue at heavy expense, only to find out later that the bonds were worthless.

McDonald Talks Back to Patterson
That's all direct, pure and simple," exclaimed MacDonald, and nobody knows it better than Patterson and the Real Estate Exchange. It looks like they're trying to give out the impression that the county commissioners are a bunch of lunkheads.

McDonald Talks Back to Patterson
"We know full well that the validity of the bonds had to be tested by the courts before any bond buyers would even consider their purchase. Patterson simply beat some one else to the proposition of filing the test suit. As for the printing and engraving as in such a foolish manner as to give Mr. Patterson a chance to make any such rash statements."

Wet Weather Makes Grain Prices Go Up
Continued wet weather over a large portion of the grain belt had a tendency to make wheat slightly bullish, and on the Omaha Grain Exchange wheat and corn advanced a cent over the prices of Saturday, and oats 1/4c to 3/8c.

STENGER STARTS ON HIS NEW POSITION HERE
Ernest Stenger, general superintendent of the Union Pacific, left for the west yesterday to make his first official inspection of the company lines. He returned from St. Joseph Saturday night, and before leaving for the west, took charge of the company offices here as general superintendent.

STENGER STARTS ON HIS NEW POSITION HERE
For the present, at least, Mr. Stenger will continue to perform the duties of general manager of the St. Joseph & Grand Island road, a position that he held prior to his promotion to the general superintendency of the Union Pacific.

STENGER STARTS ON HIS NEW POSITION HERE
Leading the way into one of the reception rooms, which was deserted at that hour of the night, he closed the door behind them and bolted it. Then, while Hope and Cleo watched him curiously, he laid on the table the parcel which he carried, broke the string and unwrapped the paper. Before them lay the missing books!

STENGER STARTS ON HIS NEW POSITION HERE
"Great Heavens, man, where did you get them? We thought that they were gone for good." Hope almost shouted in his excitement, while Cleo, throwing both arms about the old seaman's neck, implanted a kiss on each of his cheekbones. "I found them in a de-takative, even if I do say so," admitted Hook, with evident pride in his achievement.

STENGER STARTS ON HIS NEW POSITION HERE
"But tell us about it, Hook," pleaded Cleo, bubbling with curiosity. "How did you get the books? Where on earth did you find them?"

STENGER STARTS ON HIS NEW POSITION HERE
"Waal, Miss Cleo," said the old seaman, producing a slab of villainous, colored tobacco and slicing off a piece with great deliberation. "This here was the way it happened. After you and the lieutenant started for the party I thought I'd hunt up some friends of mine and have a glass or two with 'em. Waal, I'd dropped into that cigar store at the corner of Third and Market to get a plug of tobacco, when in comes a feller in a dress suit, with an overcoat over it, and asked the clerk which was the car he should take for Omaha. I told him I should take for Omaha. He said, 'Well, I want to go to the British consul's. That made me kind of prick up my ears, and when he turned around I got a good look at him. By the living Jingo, if it wasn't that feller called Mahlin—the same that I seen over at Valdivia one day a while back a-talkin' to Satsuma. 'Oh ho, sez I to myself, 'there's some hanky-panky a-goin' on. What might you be going to the British consul for?' So I stepped aboard, too, and stood on the rear platform so's he wouldn't see me. When he got off at the consular house I got off, too, and followed him until he went into the back gate. I hung round a while and then, bold's brass, I walked into the kitchen, figurin' that if anyone asked me what I wuz doin' there I'd tell 'em that I had a message for the lieutenant. But everyone was busy, with waiters hustling in and out, and no one paid no attention to me. So I jested slipped up the back stairs, thinkin' I'd have a look round upstairs for I'd Mahlin. I hadn't no more than got into the upstairs hall, though, before I heard, somewhere in the front of the house, the damndest hullabaloo I ever listened to. It sounded like an anchor chain runnin' through a saw hole. I'm in him wuz a screamin' and men a-hooping and yellin' and I broke loose generally. I run forrad just in time to see the lieutenant a-rollin' down the companionway all tangled up with a feller with a black mask on."

STENGER STARTS ON HIS NEW POSITION HERE
"By the way," he added, turning to Cleo, "we mustn't forget about the books."

STENGER STARTS ON HIS NEW POSITION HERE
"Will you run up and get them," said Cleo. "I know just where they are. They are lying on the table in the study. We were looking at them when we heard the man sneeze behind the curtain."

The Secret of the Submarine
SIXTH INSTALLMENT.
Synopsis.

The Secret of the Submarine
Lieutenant Jarvis Hope is detailed by the United States naval board to investigate and report his findings on the invention of Dr. Ralph Burke, which serves to bring the submarine to a state of perfection. The lieutenant arrives in Valdivia and is welcomed by the inventor and his daughter, Cleo. On the trip to the inventor's boat, a Japanese helper is surprised in the act of examining the mechanism of the ventilating device. Hope reports favorably on the new device, but there are other things in the inventor's laboratory that surprise him.

The Secret of the Submarine
The inventor's laboratory is full of surprises. Dr. Burke's laboratory falls, but later Cleo finds him murdered in his bedroom. Cleo reports her father's library to get money; later she finds a note from which she learns that they contain the secret formula. With Hope she races to the auctioneer's store only to find it in flames. Olga, Yvonne and Gerald Morlan, two of the search of the formula, attempt to capture Cleo when she calls at the home of Stephanski, the anarchist. Hope rushes to her aid, Morton shoots at him, but the bullet hits a bomb in the cellar, which explodes. Stephanski dies in the wreck of his house; the others escape. Hope and Cleo attend a ball at the Delmar, where Stephanski has two of the missing books. Mahlin, an spy, attempts to steal the books, but is discovered by Hope, in the excitement that follows the books disappear.

The Secret of the Submarine
Fear clutching at her heart, Cleo, followed by Mrs. Delmar and a throng of terrified guests, burst into the conservatory, through whose roof Hope and his masked assailant had plunged in their mad struggle. The young officer, begrimed and disheveled, was supporting himself against a column. His clothes were in tatters and from an ugly gash in his head trickled a scarlet rivulet. His adversary had disappeared.

The Secret of the Submarine
"He got away," he croaked. "I couldn't hold him. He broke loose and ran through that door into the garden."

The Secret of the Submarine
"Oh, my dear, I thought that you had been killed," cried Cleo, almost hysterical with mingled anxiety and relief. "Are you hurt badly, Jarvis?" "It's only a scratch," said Hope weakly, dropping into a chair which someone hastily brought.

The Secret of the Submarine
"I'm going to send you home in my limousine," said Mrs. Delmar. "It will be more comfortable than a taxi-cab. And I can never thank you enough, Mr. Hope, for your bravery in grappling with that burglar. If it hadn't been for you he would have robbed the house."
