Synopsis.

Lieutenant Jarvis Hope is detailed by the United States naval board to investigate and report his findings on the investigate and report his findings on the investigate and report his findings on the investion of Dr. Raiph Burke, which serves to bring the submarine to a state of perfection. The lleutenant arrives at Valdavia and is well-comed by the investor and his daughter, Cleo. On the trial trip of the investor's boat, a Japanese hoper is surprised in the act of examining the mechanism of the ventilating device. Hope reports favorably on the new device, but there are others interseted in it. An attempt to template finder Burke's absence of the investigation of the new device, but there are others intersected in it. An attempt to template finde her father's literary to get money, ister abe finde a note from which she learns that they contain the secret formula. With Hope she races to the auctioneer's store only to find it in fismes. Olgs lavanoff and Gerald Morton, two spies in search of the formula, attempt to capture Cleo when she calls at the house of Stephanski, the anarchist. Hope rushes to her aid; Morton shoots at him, but the hullet hits a bomb, in the cellar, which explodes Riephanski dies in the wreck of his house; the others secape Hope and Cleo attend a bail at Mrs. Delmar's, whose nephew has two of the missing books, but is discovered by Hope in the excitement that follows the book disapperar.

"Good," said Olga. "Telephone Mr. Morton that I will call for him at his hotel in ten minutes. Then wait for us at the wharf."

Little did either of the two parties who were now speeding toward the islands dream that, from over on the Oakland side of the harbor a third Oakland side of the harbor a thra-launch was starting for the same des-tination. In it were three men; Mah-lin, Satsuma and the Japanese. When Olga learned of the move-ments of Hope and Cleo through the espionage of Sextus, Mahlin had sur-mised. When, bruised, battered and aching in every limb from his en-counter with Hope, he reached his rooms, almost the first thing he did was to consult the copy of the list which Satsuma had obtained from Dawson. The next name he found was that of Arthur Mitzmaurice and was that of Arthur Mitzmaurice and his address was given as the Commercial hotel. Calling up that hostelry he learned that Mr. Fitzmaurice had departed. His forwarding address, so the night clerk informed him, was in care of the local office of the United States coast survey. The following morning Mahlin called at the coast survey offices only to learn that Fitzmaurise was at work charting the Farallone group and that it ing the Farallone group and that it was uncertain when he would return. It was well into the afternoon, there-fore, before he and Satsuma started for the islands in a launch which the for the islands in a launch which the latter had hired from a fellow countryman living on the Oakland side. Before leaving Mahlin took the precaution of calling up Hope's hotel.

"Lieutenant Hope will not be back until tonight," the telephone girl informed him. "He has gone to the Farallones."

As Mahlin hung up the receiver a grim smile flitted across his saturnine face. His surmises had proved cor-rect. Hope had acted as he had anticipated.

There were now three craft racing toward the same goal. Well in the lead was the small launch containing Hope and Cleo. Bearing down on a more northerly course was the power boat hired by Mahlin and Satsuma, while somewhere astern pounded the larger craft bearing Morton, Olga and Sextus. Doubtless all three of and Sextus. Doubtless all three of the skippers would have exercised more caution could they have seen the notices which were being dis-played that afternoon on the bulletin boards of the various shipping of-

The mill-pond calimness which prevailed in the inner harbor proved to be no criterion of the weather without, for in the bay a brisk breeze was blowing and outside the Gate the breeze turned into a gale. In fact, so heavy a sea was running that darkness was descending when Morissey ran his launch under the lee of the lighthouse on Southeast island and Hope and Cleo clambered ashore. In response to their whis-tle a gray-bearded man, tall and an-gular, appeared in the doorway of a small, whitewashed building which adjoined the lighthouse.

a small, whitewashed building which adjoined the lighthouse.

"That's the keeper, Captain Fairweather," said Morissey. "You may find him a bit gruff at first, sir, but I guess I'd be gruff too if I had to spend my life on a rock like this."

"I am Lieutenant Hope of the navy," Hope introduced himself. "I am looking for a man named Fitzmaurice of the coast survey. I understand that he is over here charting the islands."

"Mr. Fitzmaurice left this morning for Middle Island," was the answer.

"And how about you, Cleo?"

"Oh. I would rather go on, Jarvis," she answered. "I couldn't sleep tonight if I felt that those books were only six miles away. I'm not in the least afraid—with you with me." The last four words were spoken so softly that only Hope could hear.

"Remember," the keeper called after them as they turned back to the host. "there's some bad reefs be-

Sidewalk Built of Stone

From Wyoming Torn Up The old stone sidewalk at Tenth

The old stone sidewalk at Tenth and Harney streets, in front of the building that for years was the James Stephenson livery, sales and feed stables, is being torn out and in its place one of cement is being laid. The stone sidewalk was laid more than twenty-five years ago and of material brought from Wyoming, and there had never been a sidewalk laid in Omaha that has been responsible for quite as much profanity.

The stone in the Stephenson sidewalk was brought from some of the Wyoming fossil beds, and the stone was filled with petrified sticks, fish, snakes and other creatures that roamed up and down upon the earth centuries ago, when it was in its making. As these disintegrated and broke out of the solid lime rock, they left cavities anywhere from one-half to an inch in depth. As a result the sidewalk became as rough as a stretch of cobble stone road and was hard to walk over. hard to walk over.

The grave was beneath the shadow of a large spruce tree which the elder Mrs. Sunday planted herself many years ago. The burial place is a private cemetery for the Sunday family. In his reminiscences "Billy" Sunday related a boyhood incident. He was sawing wood after nightfall and his mother held a light inside of a window of the home, that he might better see to direct the saw.

Wednesday, adopted these resolutions of sorrow and appreciation:

The most profound, most wonderful faculty of the human mind is imagination not mere imaginings or idle fancy playing with unrealities, but that vision, that far-seeing power which is beyond swery achievement whether it be science art, literature or commercialism. It is greater than the intellect, greater than talent and the possession of it is that which makes all met of achievement, all gentuses; it makes it possessor the supreme and extraordinar; benefactor of his follow man. It is a living power, a seeing much where others senothing, and Arthur Brandels was one which had this blessed gift. He saw a great duty many years ago, where others as yet could only desery an overgrown town; he had the vision, the solitity and the gentus, and Omaha is his debtor; and by his death it loss is deep and real. To his wife, hid daughters, and supecially to his son, whe carries on the name, this must be a tremendous thought, a thought to conside with comfort and pride.
