

LAST OF THE WARS BETWEEN NATIONS

DeLarme Predicts America Has Great Future Work in Shaping World Affairs.

NEVER BEATEN IN WAR

"God has been very good to our nation. He has given her great things to do. But in the future he is going to be still better to us. And he is going to give us greater work to do."

"The United States is the one glorious nation that has never known defeat in any war," the speaker asserted.

"Washington founded the republic, Lincoln freed it and McKinley made it a champion of humanity. It remains for us to fulfill its great destiny, making it the champion of universal peace, world-wide brotherhood, national virility."

"As God has used this great country wonderfully for the liberation of men and the emancipation of thought, so he is going to use it in the future for the emancipation of the heathen and the amelioration of wrong conditions among humanity everywhere."

"We can see the hand of God throughout our history. Washington on his knees in the snow at Valley Forge is a well known figure of reverence. Benjamin Franklin stood in the constitutional convention and asserted, 'I have lived eighty-one years and the longer I live the more I see that God is shaping the destinies of men and nations and especially of this country.'"

"The really big men who have built this nation were men who believed in and trusted God. The really 'big' men will continue to be such men, for God is, indeed, raising up this nation to play a greater part in the days that are to follow the close of the great war than ever it has played before."

"This is to be the last great war among civilized nations. It seems that God is showing them the awful horror, the sickening, nauseating wretchedness of war in this one awful cataclysm, and the nations henceforth will never resort to killing of their citizens to settle their differences."

"The white-robed choir sang by request Kipling's 'Recessional,' the words and the music of DeKoven combining to show the beauties of simple faith when compared to ephemeral military glory."

"Many other pastors of the city preached patriotic sermons yesterday, not only because of the nearness of the Fourth of July, but especially because of the request of President Wilson that the nation be remembered by sermon and prayer in the churches."

Auto Thief Twits Victim and Seeks Newspaper Credit

When police recovered an automobile stolen from W. M. Ryan, Eighteenth and Pacific, they found the following note stuck on the inside of the coil box, addressed "To the owner, kindness of the police."

"I can drive them, and what I mean, hit the road. I've been playing this trick for two and a half years and have not been caught yet. Don't get more because I get it for 'I'll take care of it while in my car. Have not got the 'bad' yet, but very much obliged to you, old lad, and another thing, I'm the slick old boy. So, no line and I'll tell you about the rest that I borrowed. Get it—'I get it."

"The note was crudely scrawled on leaves torn from a cheap note book. The police have recovered two other stolen cars which were abandoned by 'horrors' after riding as far as the oil supply permitted. Both cars are Fords and so far the owners have not yet made complaint. The license numbers and other identification marks, of course, were removed by the thieves."

Discharged Soldier Is Beaten and Robbed

Fearfully beaten and in a pitiful condition, James Kelley, 34 years of age, hailing from Philadelphia, was found Sunday locked in a boxcar at Sixth and Jones streets, where on Thursday night he had been lured, straggled and robbed by four men. Kelley was recently discharged from the army at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., and was just recovering from an attack of pleurisy when he arrived in Omaha Thursday evening, on a freight train. Shortly after his arrival he met two white men, who were later joined by two negroes. Kelley accompanied the quartet to Sixth and Jones, where they suddenly sprang upon him, and after administering a terrible beating, took $20, his hat, coat, and shoes, threw him into a boxcar and fastened the door. It was here he was found more dead than alive, by a car checker, Sunday morning. After receiving medical treatment at the hands of Dr. Barney Kulakofsky, Kelley was removed to St. Joseph's hospital, where his condition is reported to be decidedly serious.

MACKAY REVIEWS YEARS OF SERVICE

Rector of All Saints' Tells of His Work of Quarter of a Century.

YEARS SEEM LIKE MONTHS

A host of friends greeted Rev. T. J. Mackay Sunday morning at All Saints' church, when he preached his twenty-fifth anniversary sermon. In opening his sermon, which partook more of the nature of an informal talk to his friends and a review of his ministry, he said:

"Just twenty-five years ago I preached my first sermon in this city as rector of All Saints' church. Standing here and looking back over the last quarter of a century how many recollections throng the mind. The twenty-five years have passed rapidly—they seem like a dream. What a long time to look forward to! But today those years that are past seem more like months than years."

Devotion of His People. In speaking of the devotion of the congregation has shown him he said: "I have not always merited that devotion, for like a true Episcopalian, I have done the things I ought not to have done, and left undone the things I ought to have done."

"I have heard clergymen say, 'I would not dare to preach as you do,' but I have never hesitated to give expression to the truth that is in me, no matter how unpopular it might be in some quarters. I have many faults, and not a few weak points, but I have never worn a disguise or mask, and all my faults are known to you all."

Quotes Opening Sermon. He later quoted from his opening sermon twenty-five years ago: "I enter this work as your rector with fear and trembling, not knowing what the result may be, confident only of this one thing, that if this work be of God it must succeed. If God be with us none can be against us. I want the hearty individual co-operation of every member of my congregation and of the citizens of this city who can find their religious wants met here. I throw myself upon your well known hospitality and public spirit and I trust my future in your hands."

And then speaking of the intervening years: "How well my anticipations were realized and how loyally my people responded! Let the past years be a witness. Never have I known of such a generous, loving vestry or a more responsive, loving congregation. It has been a constant delight to serve you, and never have I regretted my decision to make my home among you."

And in conclusion: "These twenty-five years have been very happy years and I feel today as if I were the richest man in Omaha—rich in love and affection, and rich and content beyond measure that I have been able to serve humanity inside and outside my parish. Oh! dear friends, it is this service to humanity that counts in the long run."

Booklet Issued Giving Data on Omaha Grain Mart

Under the supervision of A. D. Peters, who supplies the text, the Omaha Grain Exchange has caused to be published an illustrated booklet of seventy-two pages, telling the story of the Omaha grain market from its inception up to the present time.

The booklet is in color, printed upon the very best quality of paper and enclosed in a cover of a light brown, the front page carrying a bit of agricultural scenery, with a battery of big grain elevators in the background. This work is done in a very dark brown, with a liberal quantity of bronze.

On the title page there is a large halftone of the Omaha Grain Exchange building, while on several of the following pages are splendid interior views on the office floors. Notably among these are fine halftones, showing the trading room and the offices where inspection of grain is carried on.

The souvenir is dedicated to A. B. Stickney, who was the real founder of the Omaha grain market, and one entire page is given over to his picture and a statement of how he made it possible to build up in Omaha one of the greatest grain markets in the United States. Throughout the booklet are scattered pictures of the eighteen storage elevators, where annually millions of bushels of grain from Nebraska and the states of the central west are handled.

In preparing the booklet experts were called into service, the photographs having been made by Louis R. Bostwick, the engravings by the Baker Brothers' company and the designing and printing by the Beacon Press.
