Diga listened with ill-disguised im-patience to Morton's account of his interview with Doctor Owen. "Stupidl" she cried, stamping her foot angrily. "You should have had more senae than to olfer him money. You can't treat a man ol that type the same way you would a ward politician. All you have done is to make him angry and sus-picious." "Let's hear what you have to sug-gest, then," said Morton morosely. "Inhisk that lwil call on Dr. Emer-son Owen myself," remarked Olga pinning on her hat. "I should like to know a little more about the ar-rangement of his house." The neatly-gowned maid who an-swered the bell told Olga that Dr. Owen was occupied with a patient, but if she would take a seat in the wailing room he would be at liberty in a few minutes. No sooner had the maid left, however, when Olga began to take stock of her surround-ings. The door at her left, from which came the mufiled sound of voices, led, she had no doubt, into the consulta-tion room. But there were two other doors and it was necessary to the per-fection of har plans that she know it what rooms they opened. Softly turning the knob of one of the doors, she pushed it far enough ajar to catch a gimpse of a room that was evident-ly the doctor's study, and beyond, a dining room. The other door, through which the maid had disappeared, she sopened boldy. It led, as she suspect-ed, into a hallway communicating with the service portion of the house. At that moment the maid appeared, com-ing evidently from the kitchen. "Teel a little faint," said Olga. "May I trouble you for a glass of water?" "Cartainly, madam," was the an-swer. Till bring you a glass at once. A the moment the indormation that she wanted; she was now acquainted with the interior arrangement of the house. A tew minutes later the door of the consultation room was thrown open FOR RENT-Business Pr'p'ty Walnut 2739.

As she entered she noticed that the consultation room had another door, opening directly out of doors, by which those patients who did not wish to pass through the waiting room could depart unobserved. "You don't look as though you were in need of my services, madam," said the doctor, noting with approval Olga's superb coloring and fine physique. "It isn't your professional services that I want, doctor," she replied, with an alluring smile. "All I want is a few minutes of your time. I have here," and she opened a parcel which she had brought with her, "a specimen youme of the new edition of the Enhave seen you. Shall arrive Sandsboro tomorrow. JARVIS HOPE, Lieutenant United States Navy. Returning the telegram to Doctor Owen, Morton took from his pocket a large roll of bills. "I might as well be frank with you, doctor," said he. "I want that book and I'm willing to pay for it. Come now, what's your price?" But he had misjudged his man. Stepping to the door, the physician threw it open.

(Continued From Yesterday.) "Oh, yes," said Owen, his manner immediately chilling, "Fitzmaurice did lend me such a book." "I'm very anxious to consult that book, doctor," Morton continued. "I wonder if you would be willing to lend it to me for a few days—or even a few hours?" "I'm afraid not," was the answer. "For the present, at least, I don't care to let the book go out of my possession."

care to let the book go out of my possession." "I do not wish to appear insistent, doctor," argued Morton, "but may ask your reasons for refusing to let me borrow the book?" "This is my reason," replied the physician, taking a telegram from his pocket and handing it to Morton, who read:

Dr. Emerson Owen, Sandsboro,
